

Army to 'Slip 'n Slide' Today Spirit Erupts Across Campus

By DAVE RUNKEL

If all reports prove correct today, Army will slip 'n slide from the time they are scheduled to arrive on campus till the time they leave.

Rain has been predicted for the football game and reports circulated around campus last night that the train bringing 1,100 Army cadets to campus will run into a greasy problem between here and Bellefonte.

Several students were said to be planning to grease an upgrade on the railroad tracks of the Bellefonte Central Railroad. It was reported that this worked perfectly the last time a train "attempted" to bring a load of Pitt students to campus for a football game.

The cadets' train is scheduled to pull up near the Food Service Building at 9 this morning.

All week plans for foiling Army have been in the making on campus. The Association of Women Students has done its share by attempting to get the Black Knights from Army concentrating on other things beside football.

They have planned a dance for the cadets from 8 to 12 tonight in the Hetzel Union ballroom. Penn State couples are also invited and all coeds have been issued a special invitation.

Students in West Halls expressed their feelings with a huge banner yelling all to "Kick the A."

Yesterday afternoon "Eric" the mule paraded around campus. He was a walking billboard publicizing the Pep Rally held last night in front of Old Main.

PENN STATE'S VERSION of the Army mule and the Nittany Lion, symbols of the football prowess of West Point and Penn State, "squared-off" at the pep rally last night in front of Old Main. The mule, borrowed from an agriculture prof, was led around campus all day yesterday.

The mule had many coeds fussing around it and several of the groundskeepers fussing about it. The coeds admired the handsome animal. However, the groundskeepers passed a warning to the head lawnmower to watch out the next time he mows along the Mall or in front of Old Main. Things were brought to a head at last night's Pep Rally. It was estimated that over 1,000 spirited fans urged the team to make it three-in-a-row over Army.

Zorin Claims U.N. Seizure

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin charged yesterday that "one man"—evidently meaning American Andrew W. Cordier—had seized power illegally over the U.N. Secretariat.

Zorin, at a 1½-hour news conference, alleged that the unidentified official was running the 4,400-member Secretariat of the 101-nation organization in a one-sided way.

State-Army Clash Today At Stadium

By JIM KARL

Collegian Sports Editor

Pete Liske, a sophomore signal-caller who proved that Penn State does have a passing attack, will operate State's first unit against Army at Beaver Stadium today in the top gridiron attraction in the East.

Cloudy skies and light showers are expected along with a sellout crowd of 46,000. Starting time is 1:30 p.m.

The game could be a milestone for Lion coach Rip Engle, who needs only one more win to reach the 100 mark. His record is 99-52-8.

Strangely enough, Engle's first loss as a college coach was to Army, 59-7, when the Ripper was at Brown in 1944.

Army coach Dale Hall wants the victory for another reason—he has yet to beat Penn State since taking over for Red Blaik at the end of the 1958 season.

The Lions defeated Army 17-11 in 1959 and 27-16 last year. But State can claim only one other win in the much interrupted series (3-6-2) that dates back to 1899.

Galen Hall, State's veteran quarterback, is not completely recovered from a bruised shoulder that he suffered against Miami two weeks ago and he probably won't see any action today.

Don Caum will back up Liske on State's Reddie Unit. Liske has completed 15 of 23 passes in two games this year and last week guided State to a 32-0 victory over BU.

In their two other games to date (Continued on page six)

The 60-year-old Cordier, long a key figure in the organization declined to comment on the charges.

A spokesman for the Secretariat denied that any one man had taken charge among the 29 U.N. undersecretaries.

In a statement, he said there had been "no change whatsoever in the responsibilities" of the undersecretaries, but they were consulting among themselves much more than before Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold died in a plane crash in Africa Sept. 18.

Zorin said the United Nations would collapse "if the path of nonagreed decisions is taken" in the Secretariat.

He reiterated the Soviet Union's willingness to have a single acting secretary-general take charge temporarily instead of the three-man board, or troika, that it wants to be installed eventually.

He said the acting secretary-general should choose three, four, six or seven other secretaries of specified nationalities for principal advisers and should promise before his election to consult them and seek mutual agreement with them on major questions. But he stressed that the top man should make his own decisions and should not be subject to their veto.

U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson, Zorin's opposite number in negotiations on the subject, commented that the United States would "resist the concept of the troika or the ideological division of the world into three blocs."

"I wish Mr. Zorin would not threaten the United Nations with disaster if he does not have his way," he added.

Zorin said Hammarskjold had made one-sided decisions without consulting or even informing his assistants, especially Undersecretary Georgy P. Arkadev of the Soviet Union.

Students, Staff Select Tribunal Members

By DAVE RUNKEL

(This is the third in a series of articles discussing the men's disciplinary system at the University. Today membership of the tribunals will be discussed.)

Members of men's tribunals are chosen by a selection board comprised of both students and members of the dean of men's staff.

Usually two members of the dean's staff, the past tribunal chairman and, in the case of the residence hall tribunals, the area president make up this committee, Daniel R. Leasure, assistant dean of men, said.

Tribunal positions are usually held by upperclassmen. However, Leasure said, vacancies occurring during the year may be filled by freshmen.

Leasure said that all new tribunal members undergo a short training program. This session usually consists of a discussion of the penalties which may be imposed and a review of past cases.

At the present time only three of the six men's tribunals have been selected, Leasure said. These are the Off-Campus Tribunal with eight members and a chairman and the West and Pollock area boards, each with seven members and a chairman.

The Off-Campus Tribunal attempts to maintain a balance between fraternity and independent men. The members of each residence hall tribunals are selected from the men living in that area.

Foianini to See Prexy

Dennis Foianini, SGA President, said last night that he has received 5,000 signatures on petitions backing the students' plea for the Thanksgiving recess.

Foianini will meet with President Eric A. Walker at 9:30 a.m. today to discuss the recess.

Cold Weather Due

A major upheaval in the weather regime over North America will cause an abrupt end to the Indian Summer weather today.

The change to cooler weather should be accompanied by a few showers this morning, but no precipitation is expected during this afternoon's football game.

The trend towards cooler weather should continue through tonight and tomorrow.

Today should be mostly cloudy, windy and cooler with showers this morning. A high temperature of 62 degrees is expected.

Clearing, breezy and colder weather is forecast for tonight and a low of 36 degrees is expected.

Tomorrow will be sunny, but cool.

Deans Express Views on Vacation

By CAROL KUNKELMAN and SARALEE ORTON

Opinions from three of the 10 college deans and one from an associate dean indicated yesterday that they are not in favor of an extended Thanksgiving vacation. Five deans could not be reached, and one refused to comment.

Various reasons were given during the survey conducted by The Daily Collegian. All of the deans stated that they thought the calendar should be followed as set. Most expressed concern about the short time allowed to cover assigned study material. They also seemed to think that students would benefit more by having a continuous term instead of a break.

Two deans doubted the soundness of student arguments.

These are the opinions as expressed by the deans:

Ben Euwema, College of the Liberal Arts: "The simplest thing to do is to follow the present calendar. In a week or 10 days after Thanksgiving, everyone will have a full vacation. The student arguments presented thus far are not especially sound. I think it's a bad thing psychologically for the students to have a vacation so near the end of the term."

David R. Mitchell, College of Mineral Industries: "The thing that worries me is that we only have 10 weeks in a term. Every extra day counts more. The primary reason we are here is education. A lot of instructors have come to me worrying about how they will cover the subject matter in 10-weeks time. Their main interest is to do the right thing by the students. Not one has spoken seriously about the desirability of a vacation."

Donald H. Ford, Division of Counseling: "The faculty has reason to question the rationale of student arguments for a vacation, when a year ago they gave up a day of study for the Liberty Bowl half-holiday. Most of them, I think, aren't going to study. If they put their request in a direct form, saying that they wanted to go to Pitt or home for Thanksgiving because it is traditional, I think their request would be more reasonable."

Lawrence J. Perez, associate dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture: "The vacation wouldn't be beneficial. Fewer students will be killed in cars if they don't go home. The plans of the University revolve around the calendar, and the change would disrupt the plans of faculty members, staff members and dining hall personnel, who have already planned to be here. I think the best thing to do is to make this year a pilot run to see how everyone takes it."

The Senate Committee on Class Calendar and Schedule met Thursday to consider a proposal by Harvey Klein and Marjorie Ganter. Klein and Miss Ganter, student members of the committee, proposed that Dec. 5-7, three extra days in the fall term, be used for classes instead of Nov. 25 and 26.

Harold J. Read, chairman, told the students the committee felt there was no evidence that the weekend Thanksgiving vacation would be a valuable addition to the term calendar.

Klein and Miss Ganter are working on a revised proposal to present to the 7-member committee on Wednesday.
