(Continued from page eight) group interested in improving the town. They then outline a program for improvement and present it to the merchants so that they will realize the possibilities for improving their individual businesses. Mrs. Osborne gives particular information on the good use of color in such improvements.

Most merchants are anxious to find ways of improving their businesses by making their shops more pleasant shopping places, Osborne said. Since many small town merchants are competing with modern shopping centers they find that they must make improvements to keep their customers, he added.

Often improving the business district of a town causes the people to become interested in improving their homes so that the entire town develops a new beauty, Osborne explained.

This outside work is coordinated with teaching at the University since he teaches a course in city planning.

(Continued from page one) students tomorrow morning. It is the sub-committee's job to decide what matters should be brought before the Senate. The next Senate meeting is Nov. 7.

Klein said yesterday he expected to have the formal proposal prepared by today.

"We have been told that a basic change in policy must be proposed rather than a temporary change for just this year," Klein said. "We are basing our proposal on this statement."

'62 CORVAIR MONZA

NEW FACE, SAME SPORTING HEART

We might as well tell you straight off: Corvair's the car for the driving enthusiast. Think that lets you out? Maybe. Maybe not.

Until you've driven one, you really can't say for sure, because Corvair's kind of driving is like no other in the land. The amazing air-cooled rear engine sees to that. You swing around curves flat as you please, in complete control. You whip through the sticky spots other cars should keep out of in the first place. (Especially this year, now that you can get Positraction as an extra-cost option.) You stop smoothly, levelly with Corvair's beautifully balanced, bigger brakes.

And Corvair's found other new ways to please you this year. A forced-air heater and defroster are standard equipment on all coupes, sedans and both Monza and 700 Station Wagons. So are dual sunshades and front-door armrests and some other goodies. You'll note some new styling, inside and out. Nice. And safety-belt installation is easier, too, and cheaper. Another extra-cost option well worth considering is the heavy-duty front and rear suspension; it turns a Corvair into a real tiger.

So you can see we haven't really done much to Corvair this year. Why on earth should we? If this car, just as she is, can't make a driving enthusiast out of you, better take a cab.

And here's America's only thoroughbred sports car, the '62 CORVETTE. We warn you: If you drive a Corvette after your first sampling of a Corvair, you may well end up a two-car man. And who could blame you?
