

15 Projects Planned by Corps

The heart of Africa, the edge of Asia and the coast of South America will soon be acquainted with Peace Corps volunteers who are in training or in service with any of the 15 Peace Corps projects planned for countries in those areas.

Approximately 700 volunteers, most of them college graduates, have been assigned to educational and development projects in Tanganyika, Ghana, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, India, East Pakistan, West Pakistan, Malaya, Thailand, the Philippines, Colombia, Chile and St. Lucia (West Indies Federation).

Thirty geologists and surveyors trained at Texas Western University in El Paso, arrived in Tanganyika this month to survey projected roads. The roads when completed will aid farmers in getting fresh produce to the markets faster.

The University of California at Berkeley was the training center for 58 men and women who will fill secondary school teaching assignments in Ghana.

Three teaching projects are planned to fill a request from the Nigerian government for approximately 130 Peace Corpsmen. The first group of 45 men and women trained at Harvard University for assignments in the eastern part of the country. Michigan State University in East Lansing is training the second group of 35 volunteers who will teach at a newly opened university in Nigeria.

A Puerto Rican survival training camp is the first stop (four weeks) for 50 volunteers selected for the Sierra Leone education project.

Twenty-five volunteers will soon be scattered throughout the Punjab state in India to aid in small agricultural projects. Their training center is Ohio State University.

Irrigation, farm production, sanitation, and communication are a few of the fields in which 30 specialized men and women will work in East Pakistan. A similar project is planned for West Pakistan. The volunteers for East Pakistan are training in Putney, Vt. at the headquarters of The Experiment in International Living.

Malaya has requested 40 volunteers from the Peace Corps to work as nurses and laboratory technicians in district hospitals. These volunteers arrived Monday at Northern Illinois University for their eight-week training program.

Last week 50 others assigned to Thailand for a project to aid education and public health began training at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

The largest group of volunteers requested by any country are being trained at the University which is under contract to train 300 volunteers by June 1962 as teachers-aides for the Philippines.

Rutgers University trained 78 corpsmen for a rural development project in Colombia. CARE, Inc., will administer the program in that country.

Introducing better farming methods and lowering the infant mortality rate in Chile are the goals for 45 volunteers who arrived in that country three weeks ago. This group was trained at Notre Dame University.

The smallest number of volunteers is heading for a small country—St. Lucia—in the Caribbean to aid in soil and livestock improvement and production. The 18 men and women were trained at Ohio State University.

Parmi Nous Hat Society Taps Ten Senior Men

Ten men were tapped for membership in Parmi Nous, senior men's hat society, recently.

John Glassburn, William Polacek and Glenn Ream were tapped for their contribution to athletics.

John Beauge, Wayne Hilinski and Craig Yerkes were tapped for their participation in publications activities.

Four men were tapped for student government activities. They are Michael Forsys, Robert Fry, Richard Kelley and Robert Schwartz.

Smith to Talk at UCA Series

Dr. William Smith, Jr., state 4-H club leader and former professor of child development and family relations, will speak on "How Important Are Your Personal Relationships?" for the third program in the Freshman Series sponsored by the University Christian Association.

Dr. Smith will speak at 6:30 tonight in the Memorial Lounge of the Helen Eakin Eisenhower Chapel. Following his talk, the audience will divide into discussion groups led by U.C.A. Student Council officers. Refreshments will be served after the program.

Although the series is especially designed for freshmen, upperclassmen are invited to participate. Genevieve Dilts, associate director of U.C.A. said. The purpose of the series is to stimulate thought about some of the basic decisions students in college often make without careful examination, she added.

Council Elections--

The Chemistry and Physics Council will have polling places in Osmond and Whitmore in addition to the Hetzel Union.

The College of Physical Education and Athletics will hold elections in the classroom. Mineral Industries Council members were elected yesterday.
