

Disciplinary Power Held In Senate

By DAVE RUNKEL

This is the last article in a series discussing the men's disciplinary system. Today the role of the Senate Sub-Committee on Discipline will be explained.

The Senate Sub-Committee on Discipline is the supreme body in the men's disciplinary system. The entire system, starting with the sub-committee itself and extending to the area tribunals and the residence hall counselors, operates according to the policy outlined and defined by the sub-committee.

Although policy-making is the chief function of the sub-committee, most of its time is spent in reviewing disciplinary cases in which penalties of suspended suspension or higher have been leveled against students.

The sub-committee also sits as a "court of appeals." Any student who is dissatisfied with the penalty he has received by the dean of men's office may appeal for a more lenient penalty to the sub-committee, Daniel R. Leasure, assistant dean of men, said last week.

Few students take advantage of this privilege, he added.

Students along with faculty and staff members sit on the sub-committee. It is headed by Dr. Laurence H. Lattman, who is also chairman of the parent committee, the Senate Committee on Student Affairs.

Voting members of the discipline sub-committee are Lattman; Dennis Foianini, SGA president, or a representative appointed by him; Dr. John D. Walmer, University psychiatrist; and the dean of the college in which the student appearing before the group is enrolled.

Leasure, as a representative of the dean of men's office, attends the meetings to present information concerning the case but does not have a vote.

West Halls Holds Banner Competition

Pizza will flow freely soon at one of the 20 living units in West Halls.

The all-house pizza party will be the prize in a banner contest, which is being sponsored by the West Halls Council. Judging of the banners is scheduled to begin at 5:15 p.m. tonight and is expected to be completed by 6 p.m.

The theme of the contest is the football game with California this weekend. George Henning, president, said. The banners will be judged on individuality, creativeness and workmanship, he said. The area council members will act as judges in the contest.

Each of the houses has entered a banner in the contest and has had approximately two weeks to work on it, Henning added.

Coed Will Give Report On Crossroads Africa

Bernice Parr, a junior in arts and letters from Pittsburgh, will report tonight on her work in Nigeria this summer with Crossroads Africa.

She will discuss the question "Is the World Your Responsibility?" during the freshmen series of the University Christian Association from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the Chapel lounge.

Ross Says Corps Needs 'Middle Men'

The Peace Corps will provide "middle men power" in under developed countries in projects of direct people to people aid, Mrs. Marise Ross, visiting Peace Corps field representative said last night.

At a talk sponsored by the Home Economics Student Council Mrs. Ross said "these countries have an over-abundance of unskilled labor and they can hire experts for specific projects."

But, she said, they need the middle men who will carry through the projects and train others in the countries to keep the knowledge in circulation.

College students, non-college students and older people with specific practical experience can supply that middle man power through the Peace Corps, she said.

Mrs. Ross said current Peace Corps projects call for persons with knowledge in teaching, nursing, home economics, physical education, agriculture and the technical sciences.

Other individuals who would help with the building of roads and schools are needed. In many cases, she said the roads and schools must come first before the Peace Corps sends in teachers.

The first step in applying for Peace Corps service is to fill out the Peace Corps questionnaire, she said. Questionnaires are available at the State College Post Office, from Dr. Robert Murray, campus Peace Corps liason representative, or by writing to Peace Corps, Washington 25, D. C.

After a questionnaire is received by the Peace Corps, the volunteer will receive a notice telling him when and where the next examination will be given, she said.

Mrs. Ross said the volunteers who serve in countries around the world "will learn as much as they teach." The Peace Corpsmen will "work harder in training and in service than they ever have before in their lives." But, she added they will also find it the most satisfying work they have ever done.

Yellow Pages Defray Costs Of Directories

Attractive new 1961-62 student and faculty directories, complete with yellow pages, are now being distributed on campus.

The College Science Publishers are providing each residence hall room and faculty member with a free copy, Dr. Donald E. H. Frear, company representative said yesterday.

Last year the publishing and distributing costs were backed by the University, Frear said. Because of the great financial burden, the venture was turned over to the private concern, The College Science Publishers, he said.

Frear said the yellow pages in the directory were added because advertising space sold in the yellow page section combats the printing cost.

The directories, featuring an olive cover for the students listing and an indigo cover for the faculty listing, are on sale at the various bookstores in State College and at the Hetzel Union desk.

Cost per copy is $1 for student directories and 75 cents for faculty directories, Frear said. Last year the directories were sold for 50 cents per copy, but Frear could give no reason for the rise in cost.

Another new feature of the student directory is the inclusion of student names, addresses and telephone numbers from all of the University Commonwealth campuses. Frear said the University wished to link all the students in one directory.

Pollution Appeal--

The borough of State College, which uses the facilities have conditionally removed themselves from any financial responsibility. Borough Manager Robert V. Edwards said earlier this month that the town is merely a customer of the University.

At a press conference with Governor Lawrence last week one of the governor's aides said he felt that the board would give the University more time if a suitable plan for halting pollution were presented.
