

'Attentive' Audience Praised by Farmer

By JOAN HARTMAN

Soft, dreamy music combined with lively, exciting jazz brought cries of "encore" from the audience Saturday night at the Jazztet concert in Schwab.

For an encore, the sextet played "Junction," one of Benny Golson's newest compositions.

Golson, besides being co-leader of the sextet, arranges about half of the group's numbers. He said after the concert that he had never studied composition formally although he had majored in music at Howard University for three years.

Art Farmer, the other co-leader, said that Saturday's audience was "very, very attentive." "College audiences on the whole are more responsive," he added.

In addition to Farmer and Golson, the Jazztet is composed of Tom McIntoch on trombone; Cedar Walton, piano; Albert Heath, drums; and Thomas Williams, string bass.

Both Farmer and Golson originally started out in music by playing different instruments than they do now. Golson studied piano but changed to tenor saxophone. "I thought I would be better at it," he explained.

Farmer played tuba and violin originally. "I switched to trumpet because I wanted to play jazz," he said.

Farmer also uses a flugelhorn in his solo work. He explained "On certain numbers I like the dark sound of the flugelhorn, while on others I prefer the clarity of the trumpet."

Farmer and Golson both believe jazz is a way of expressing oneself. "It's like holding a musical conversation," Golson said. Farmer added, "You can play a song differently each time and still be true to the song and yourself."

In 1959, Golson and Farmer each decided to form groups of their own. Each tried to hire the other, and decided to merge and form the Jazztet.

"We had worked together from time to time," Farmer explained, "and there was no one else I'd have rather worked with. I guess he felt the same way."

The sextet has made two long-playing albums and recently had a best selling record, "Killer Joe," composed by Golson. A new album entitled "The Jazztet at Bird House," which was recorded live at the Bird House in Chicago, Ill., is scheduled to be released within the next few weeks.

Four Arrested For Stealing Lounge Chairs

Four students were arrested by State College police over the weekend on charges of disorderly conduct stemming from the theft of two University-owned lounge chairs during September, 1960.

The four are Jon Boyer, junior in the division of counseling from Avondale; Bruce Campbell, senior in business administration from Philadelphia; Michael McCombs, junior in arts and letters from Pittsburgh; and David McKean, junior in mechanical engineering from Erie.

The students were charged with disorderly conduct because the value of the chairs, which were removed from Beam and Thompson Halls, did not exceed $200. Justice Guy G. Mills of State College, said yesterday.

Suspicion was aroused concerning Boyer, McCombs and McKean, all residing in apartment 44 in the Metzger Building, when Metzger's maintenance personnel began missing light bulbs on the fourth floor.

A member of the State College police accompanied a representative of Metzger on a search of the building. While in the men's apartment, an institutional lounge type chair was discovered. Its identity was admitted by the trio and Campbell was later implicated.

Collegian Promotes 4

Four journalism students were recently promoted to the Board of Advanced Reporters of The Daily Collegian.

They are Diann Rabe, junior from New Canaan, Conn.; Peggy Rush, sophomore from Uniontown; David Bolback, sophomore from Lancaster; and Joan Hartman, sophomore from Bel Air, Md.

Costs, Allowances Of Corps Explained

By DOTI DRASHER

This is the second in a series of articles explaining the various phases of the Peace Corps program.

Approximately $9,000 will be spent by the Peace Corps on each volunteer who successfully completes training, selection and the two-year period of service.

The major part of this expense will be the $75 "salary" for each month of satisfactory service completed by the volunteer in the host country.

This salary or re-adjustment allowance will be given in a lump sum to the volunteer when he returns to this country. But the re-adjustment allowance is taxable under the social security laws.

While in the host country the volunteer will also receive a monthly allowance which will enable him to live at the level of his counterpart in that country.

For example, volunteers who will serve as teachers in another country will receive an allowance equal to a native teacher's salary.

The subsistence allowance is closely calculated to cover food, clothing, housing and other incidentals. The amount of the allowance varies for each country and each Peace Corps project.

Besides these allowances, the volunteer's transportation to and from his training site in this country and his project site in the host country are paid by the Peace Corps.

During the training programs which are usually two or three months long, the volunteer receives two dollars a day for general expenses. Housing and food are provided at the training site which, for most of the 15 projects has been a university.

No more than $1,000 per volunteer for equipment for the project is allowed. This allowance is especially needed for Peace Corps projects such as surveying and road building projects in Tanganyika.

During his service in the host country the volunteer will be given a special allowance of $5 a day to travel in that country.

ISA Removes Roberta Hill For Absences

Roberta Hill, co-chairman of the Independent Students Association, was removed from her office last night at a meeting of ISA's Board of Directors because she had missed two meetings in a row. The proposed constitution of ISA states that the board may remove a member who has missed two consecutive meetings.

Preliminary nominations for vice president, the position corresponding to co-chairman under the new constitution, were held. Final nominations and the election of a vice president will be held at the next ISA meeting in two weeks.

Hollis Kane, freshman in education from Bronxville, N.Y., was elected treasurer at the meeting.

In other business, the board voted to hold a jam session Nov. 18 if enough money is available and if the Hetzel Union ballroom can be used.

Barry Rein, chairman, said that the group's constitution will not be approved until SGA has received its charter. Rein said that the organization could not draw funds or use HUB facilities until it receives its charter.

The board discussed final plans for its "Project Joey" on Nov. 11. Thirty-six independent students will go to St. Mary's and St. John's Children's Homes in Cresson to give the children gifts and other favors and to conduct a recreation period. Don Fies, "Project Joey" chairman, said.

He added that interested students may sign up for this trip at the Hetzel Union desk.

Old Shows to Appear On WDFM Schedule

Two new WDFM programs will make their appearance on the broadcasting scene this week.

"Waxworks," broadcast at 9 p.m. Wednesdays, will feature recording stars of yesterday. Among the artists to be featured are Al Jolson, Gene Austin, Paul Whiteman and Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians. "Waxworks" may also be heard over WMAJ.

The other show, "Remember Radio?" heard at 7:30 p.m., Thursdays will present a series of taped broadcasts of old network shows. Shows in the series include "Amos and Andy" and "Dragnet."
