

Tureck Conducts, Writes 'Matrix' Invitations Lost in Mail Mix-up

By ROCHELLE MICHAELS

Rosalyn Tureck, the pianist who will give an Artists' Series recital at 8 p.m. Sunday in Recreation Hall, has performed in other phases of the musical arts.

Two years ago, Miss Tureck made history when she became the first woman to conduct the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. "Her opening beat was as firm and decisive as if sculptured in stone," New York Times critic, Harold Schonberg commented at the time.

Schnelle to Talk On Placement In HUB Tuesday

The University Placement Service, its functions and its scope, will be explained at 7 p.m. Tuesday in 216 Hetzel Union Building at a program sponsored by Scrolls, senior women's hat society.

The program will feature a speech by Robert Schnelle, director of the Placement Service. It is open to the public and is aimed specifically at introducing the Placement Service to senior women.

Schnelle will discuss what the Placement Service does in aiding students in job hunting. He will explain the mechanics of the service and will also tell about the files available to students in the placement service office.

In addition to this, he will provide information as to the different types of business and industrial concerns that usually hire women.

Schnelle will also discuss when students should begin looking for permanent employment, and will explain how to write a letter of introduction and a resume to a prospective employer.

Scrolls will sponsor several other programs designed to explain the placement service and job hunting.

This year Miss Tureck is going one step further in her conducting career. She will lead two of her own orchestras: The Tureck Bach Players in London, and the Tureck Chamber Ensemble in New York.

In connection with her chamber music ensemble, Miss Tureck plays the harpsichord and clavichord, along with the piano. Commenting on her triple role in music, the Manchester Guardian said, "she is superb on all three instruments."

This season in London, Miss Tureck appeared in a series of 13 programs on a "Rock 'n Roll" television station in Manchester.

Her selections, some of which she will play here, were preludes and fugues of the Well-Tempered Clavier. After the first of the program series, British television declared "Let's have more Bach and less Rock!"

But the performing arts are not the only musical areas in which Miss Tureck participates. Her book, "Introduction to the Performance of Bach" and its accompanying record were termed a "notable innovation in the recording and publishing fields" by the magazine "Records and Recordings."

The editors of the magazine continued, "It is an example of artistic collaboration which clearly offers many opportunities for future enterprise. It is a splendid scheme and Tureck has risen to her task with wonderful assurance."

A new and larger book on Bach interpretation is Miss Tureck's most current project. It will be a study of her technical discoveries in the performance of Bach's music as well as a history of his art. The book will include chapters on phrasing, dynamics, ornamentation and problems relating to the actual technical performance of the piano.

A trophy will be given to the winner and travel grants will be awarded to the top 10 per cent in standings who reside or attend a college in USCF Region III.

Mrs. Sandburg Terms Goats 'Almost Human'

By VICKI CAPLAN

Goats are very understanding and almost human, according to Mrs. Carl Sandburg, wife of the famous poet and biographer, who has been participating in the national meetings of the American Milk Goat Record Association this past week on campus.

Mrs. Sandburg is a director of the association whose purpose is to promote the goat milk industry.

Mrs. Sandburg said she and her husband have owned goats since 1936. Mr. Sandburg also has a great interest in goats, she said, and occasionally mentions them in his poetry and other writings.

This is the first time Mrs. Sandburg has visited the University, although her husband has been here and presented lectures on numerous occasions. He was unable to accompany her on this trip.

The national meetings of the past week have been attended by more than 150 goat breeders from all over the country. The meetings will be completed today by a Spot Light Sale in the Stock Judging Pavilion. Mrs. Sandburg and many other breeders have consigned goats for sale.

Hays Plan--

32 member board are elected by alumni and the agricultural and engineering societies of the state. Six are appointed by the governor and five are determined by position.

Members selected by the above state groups are not subject to the approval of any other body.

Hays said he felt this method of selection is a "contributing factor" in determining University appropriations.

The University is presently operating on an $18.5 million budget. A $23 million appropriation was requested by the University last year, but was not granted by the legislature.

The University appropriation is allotted annually and will again come before the legislature in June of 1962.

An apparent mix-up in the mail has resulted in many students and faculty members not receiving their invitations to the Matrix Dinner, Karen Hyneckeal, acting president of Theta Sigma Phi, said last night.

The women's professional journalism society is sponsoring the dinner at 6:45 p.m. Wednesday. The guests are invited on the basis of their outstanding achievement in campus activities.

"We discovered the mix-up too late to personally contact all the people involved," Miss Hyneckeal said.

Consequently, she said, she has made arrangements with the Hetzel Union desk so that a letter of invitation will not be needed to get tickets.

The following people, who were originally included on the guest list, may get their tickets by signing in at the HUB. The cost is $3 per person.

The deadline for picking up tickets is 3 p.m. Monday.

The invited guests include members of Alpha Delta Sigma, Sigma Delta Chi, Rho-Tau Sigma and all hat societies; faculty members of the Department of Speech and the School of Journalism; presidents of all fraternities and so-rities; the advanced reporters and board of editors of The Daily Collegian and La Vie; and the members of the Journalism Club.

WDFM personnel, the officers of the Student Government Association, Independent Students Association, Interfraternity Council, Women's Student Government Association, Book Exchange and Used Book Association, the Panhellenic Council and all the college councils.

Froth board of editors and the editors-in-chief of all other campus publications.

At the dinner, Theta Sigma Phi will present a skit satirizing campus life and personalities. Also, awards will be presented to three outstanding senior women.

Helen Everitt, associate editor of The Ladies' Home Journal, will be the guest speaker.
