Dorothy Allbeck Crowned Queen At Ag Hill Party

Dorothy Ellen Allbeck, junior in agricultural journalism from Millvale, was named Miss Agriculture of 1961 on Saturday night at the Ag Hill Party.

Miss Allbeck was chosen from nine candidates. Four semi-finalists composed her court.

The semi-finalists are: Ann Iglesia, junior in medical technology from Bethlehem, Mary Kardos, junior in medical technology from State College; Beth Nesbit, sophomore in agricultural biological science from New Castle; and Dixie Lee Treese, sophomore in agricultural and biological science from Hollidaysburg.

Lois Bratzler, junior in medical technology from State College, Miss Agriculture of 1960, presented Miss Allbeck with a large bouquet of American Beauty roses and a loving cup.

Band to Give Concert

The Concert Blue Band will play for the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association tomorrow at the state farm show in Harrisburg.

A short concert session will be held in which the band will play selections from "Camelot," "Take Me Along," and "The Sound of Music."

OSGA to Back Vacation Request

The delegates to the Organization of Student Government Associations' fall meeting voted Saturday to back University Park's SGA President Dennis Foianini's attempt to get a three-day Thanksgiving recess.

"At the Friday night session, during one of the workshops, the subject of the coming Thanksgiving recess was introduced," Robert Fisher, OSGA president, said last night.

The delegates felt, he said, that since OSGA is the liaison body among the student government associations of the University's fourteen campuses that it should be able to make recommendations on University-wide issues.

SGA President Dennis Foianini introduced the proposal at the Saturday session and the group approved the backing by a ma-majority vote (9 for, 5 abstentions). Responding to the group's proposal, Fisher wrote a letter to President Eric A. Walker yesterday, recommending the Thanksgiving recess.

In part the letter read, "The members of OSGA strongly feel that the 'disadvantages' of a four-day recess are greatly outweighed by the advantages of having a break at this time in the school term.

"OSGA has therefore requested that I (Fisher, OSGA president) ask you to recommend to the University Senate tomorrow, the granting of a four-day recess, to include Friday, November 24 and Saturday, November 25."

The University Senate is scheduled to make its decision on the recess today. Foianini will appear before the group to make a final request for the recess.

Dean Lipp Gives Views on Vacation

Dean of Women, Dorothy J. Lipp said yesterday, "I, too, would like to be spending Thanksgiving with my family."

She went on to explain, however, that the world is changing, and University students must be mature enough to accept the fact that some American traditions have to go because of the pressure of the times.

Dean Lipp also said that more staff people will be affected by the vacation plan than most students seem to realize. Very few of the staff people have their "roots" here, she said, and they too would like to be going home.

Many students couldn't go home anyway, Dean Lipp said, and the Pennsylvania resident students must prepare for not being able to spend Thanksgiving at home.

U. of Va. Students Hold 'Short Vacation' Protest

By JOAN MEHAN
Special to The Collegian
CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.
—University of Virginia students rioted Friday in protest against a shortening of their Thanksgiving recess from four days to one day.

"The demonstration was a spontaneous action of the students," Richard Sunderland, sophomore at the University of Virginia said in a telephone interview last night. Sunderland, who described himself as a spectator, received nose abrasions during the demonstration.

He said that a formal protest issued by the student council to the president of the University had been denied on the grounds that the calendar had been made up a year in advance and that changing it now would upset the scheduled classes.

When contacted, Edgar F. Shannon Jr., president of the University, refused to comment on the demonstration.

He said, however, that disciplinary action at the University is recommended by the student government for the approval or change by the president. He would not predict what disciplinary action, if any, would be taken against the rioters.

Sunderland said that all the students who were identified at the demonstration had interviews with the dean of students.

Eight persons were arrested and three injured during the riot of an estimated 750 demonstrators, according to the Washington Post. About 5,000 students attend the University of Virginia. The riot ended when the police used tear gas to disperse the demonstrators.

Sunderland said the demonstration took place in two parts.

"It began about 11 p.m. on a playing field and was rather calm," he said. "At this time a dog house was burned. However, it was burned as a joke and the dog house wasn't very valuable.

"Later in the evening the

Sharp Recommends Student Referendum

Dennis Foianini, SGA president, should not submit a constitution to the joint Senate committee for further consideration until the question of political parties in elections is decided by a student referendum, Albert Sharp, Liberal party chairman, said yesterday.

"I don't believe that the three students who proposed abolishing parties last week before the joint committee are truly representative of student opinion," Sharp said.

Last week Richard Pigossi, Inter-Fraternity Council president; George Henning, Men's Residence Council president; and Robert Fry, Town Independent Men president, proposed that nominations and elections for assembly positions be carried out on the local level without political parties.

Robert Bernreuter, special assistant to the president for student affairs, said yesterday, the opinion of the three students cannot be ignored because "they have been elected to represent whole groups of students and stand as spokesmen for their groups."

"These men stated, last week, that they addressed the joint committee as interested students rather than representatives of their respective organizations," Elliot Newman, University party chairman, said.

"The lines are now clear between those who will fight to represent the will of the students and those who are interested in sacrificing ideals for their old self interest," Dennis Eisman, Campus Party chairman said yesterday.

Cool Weather to Remain

A huge hurricane in the Atlantic has caused weather systems over North America to slow down, and only minor weather changes are expected during the next several days.

Cloudy and cool weather should continue through tomorrow. A high of 50 is expected today, and a low of 44 is due tonight. Tomorrow's high will be near 52 degrees.

MISS LINDA URAM OF KAPPA DELTA

Can't help but wonder what preparation the University has made for air raid shelters for our 17,000 students. Maybe Keeler's basement!

Best parties of the weekend were Phi Mu and Delta Gamma — both, incidently, photographed in color.

Are you more alluring in the evening? We tend to think you are. As part of an experiment and partly because we have very few openings left for pre-Christmas sittings, appointments can now be had for evening sittings.

A portrait for Christmas! Could anything be more personal?
