MAYBE THIS ONE WILL STAY UP—Custodian points to extra Penn State flag which had to be put into use today. This resulted from the theft of the University's flag from the standard in front of Old Main yesterday. Clinton Davis, supervisor of the maintenance and utilities division, estimated the value of the flag at $180. He said the theft marks the third time in 11 years that a flag has been stolen.

Delegate Plans Panhel 'Check'

Nancy Williams, president of Kappa Delta sorority, said last night that Mrs. Julia Ober, Kappa Delta area representative, plans to initiate an investigation into the handling of the local chapter's alleged rush infraction by the local panhellenic judicial board.

Miss Williams said she contacted Mrs. Ober at the National Panhellenic Conference now in session in Chandler, Ariz.

She said she would begin acting on the local judicial matter immediately, Miss Williams said.

"Mrs. Ober told me," Miss Williams said, "that the local panhellenic judicial board cannot deny a sorority the right to meet its accuser face to face to discuss the accusation."

"Mrs. Ober went on to say," Miss Williams continued, "that the board cannot deny a sorority the right to appeal a judicial decision at a meeting of the entire local panhellenic council."

"When I told her how our case was handled," Mrs. Ober said, "the entire procedure you have outlined to me is illegal," Miss Williams said.

Mrs. Arthur K. Anderson, adviser for Alpha Omicron Pi sorority, yesterday charged the local panhellenic council judicial board with violating a section of the 1957 College Panhellenic Conference Agreement in penalizing Kappa Delta and Alpha Omicron Pi for rushing code infractions.

The section of the agreement which she said was violated outlines a very definite procedure for handling disputes of this kind, Mrs. Anderson said.

5,100 to March at Game

By JOAN HARTMAN

About 5,100 high school musicians will perform at the 12th annual Band Day at half-time of the Penn State-Holy Cross football game tomorrow.

Band Day will begin with a parade at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow led by the State College High School Band, followed by the 59 other high school bands as they arrive and fall into formation.

The parade will begin at the west end of Pollock Road and proceed to McAllister Hall where it will march down the Little Mall to College Ave. It will go down College Ave. to Burrowes St. and then will return to the original starting place.

A pre-game show at Beaver Stadium will feature 600 majorettes performing with the Blue Band. The majorettes will do a unison routine to the tune of "Top Hat." For an encore the Blue Band will play "Twirling Ballet," after which it will form a block "S" featuring the 23 senior band members who will be performing in their last home game.

At half-time, each of the 60 participating bands will be individually introduced, as they march on the field from the sidelines. The bands, with Blue Band members acting as guides, will form the block letters "PSU" and while standing in formation will play "America the Beautiful," "El Capitan," "Over the Rainbow," "Washington Post," "Autumn Leaves" and will conclude with the Penn State alma mater.

The majorettes of the various bands will be located at the west and north ends of the field, and the color guards will be stationed at the east end.

The largest band, including color guards and majorettes, is the Altoona High School Band with 155 members. Galeton High School with a total of 54 members is the smallest high school band attending.

State College High School will have the largest number of performing musicians with 112 and Beccaria, Coalport, Iryona Joint High School the smallest with 39.

The performers will arrive in 150 buses and 41 cars, with 13 trucks needed to bring their equipment and instruments valued at over a million dollars.

Of the 61 high school band directors attending, 17 are former Blue Band members and 3 are former presidents of the band. Twenty-five of the directors hold master's degrees in music education from the University.

Penalties Hold--

"Twenty or more people were reported in our suite, according to the accusation," Miss Weihe said.

"I explained that we often have many people in our suite on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons since there are fewer classes on those days," she said.

The Judicial Committee's letter stated that the offense was committed and that misunderstanding is no excuse for violation.

Miss Williams said that the accusation against Kappa Delta came from two women who walked through the lobby of Cross Hall, where the Kappa Delta suite is located, and reported seeing a group of people in the suite.

The women reported the incident to Janet Carlisle, Panhellenic rushing chairman, Miss Williams said.

She said that an anonymous phone call was then made to the Kappa Delta suite by a woman identifying herself as "Panhel calling," and asking how many sisters and rushees were in the suite at that time.

"It was not stated in the judicial report whether the caller was actually 'Panhel,' but the board refused to identify the caller any further," Miss Williams said.

The report made by the anonymous caller and the two women was the only evidence produced to support the charge during the meeting, she said.

"The report didn't state whether further investigation had been conducted by the Panhellenic Executive Board as the rush code implies is the correct procedure," Miss Williams said.

"But I know that no questions were asked of Kappa Delta until Miss Carlisle called to inform me of the accusation brought against us."

Miss Weihe said she felt the Panhellenic Constitution should be amended to comply with NPC agreements.

"Panhellenic has no plans to change their judicial system in dealing with rushing cases," Mrs. Vanderpool, Panhellenic advisor, said last night.
