LA Below Grades Rise Noted

There has been about an 18 percent increase in the number of below grades sent to students in the College of the Liberal Arts this term as compared to last spring, Harold J. O'Brien, assistant to the dean of the college, said recently.

Even though this is a substantial increase, the exact influence of the term system on student grades can not yet be determined definitely, he said.

"We must wait for the results of future terms to see if this increase in the number of below grades is a trend," O'Brien said.

Possible factors to be considered in analyzing the increase listed by O'Brien were:

- There are more students enrolled in the college, so perhaps this is a natural increase.

rolled in the college, so perhaps this is a natural increase.

- The quality of the students enrolled in the college has improved, so maybe there should be fewer below grades.

- Students are taking fewer courses, hence there should be fewer chances of receiving below grades.

In other questions created by the term system, O'Brien said some members of the liberal arts faculty believe that too many tests are being given with the term system. The semester testing system has been carried over to the term plan, and it looks as though it may be necessary to decrease the number of examinations being given because of the switch of systems, he said.

O'Brien called the 10-week period under the term system a disadvantage in learning some kinds of subject matter in the college.

There has been a sharp increase in the number of students complaining about the work load because of the system change, Richard C. Maloney, associate dean of the liberal arts college, said yesterday.

Of course, he said only those having problems come into this office, so the exact impact of the term plan on student work schedules is not known yet. But, a large number of students have asked to decrease their academic load.

Coeds Hear Nehru

By SANDY YAGGI

Two University students attended the recent meeting of the Collegiate Council for the United Nations in New York, at which India's Prime Minister Nehru was the principal speaker.

Alice Brunton, junior in liberal arts from Levittown, N.Y., and Joan Dubin, junior in secondary education from Philadelphia, represented the International Relations Club at the conference.

In the crowded Windsor Ballroom of the Commodore Hotel, more than 2,000 students representing 43 states listened attentively as Nehru spoke, Miss Brunton said.

"I found his talk stimulating for it enabled the students to get a good impression of his philosophy," she said.

Nehru discussed the role of the nonaligned nations in attempts to reduce tension by the division of the world into hostile blocs, Miss Brunton said. He objected to the term "neutral" referring to India's position, she added.

"Following his talk, Nehru answered some questions that had been prepared in advance by the group," Miss Brunton said.

"When asked what he thought the United States college students could do to further the cause of peace, he replied that we must use clear thinking and must not let anger cloud our thinking."

He said further that U.S. thinking has not caught up with its technology, she added.

The conference, lasting two days, also included talks by Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on International Organization Affairs, and the U.N. delegates from Nigeria, Russia and Philippines.

"Senator Clark spoke dynamically, saying that Red China must be included in any disarmament plan and that this is the toughest nut that the U.S. has to crack," Miss Brunton said.

The U.N. delegates outlined what they thought were the greatest problems confronting the U.N. this year, she said.

"They cited the disarmament question as generally the most important at present. They all seemed to feel that the question of the secretary-general will not be a problem again until 1963."

Commenting on the conference, Miss Brunton said, "I thought it was extremely worthwhile and I think more events of this type should be sponsored. It was particularly valuable because it clarified for me some of Nehru's stands. It was encouraging to see all the interest taken by students in international affairs."
