

LION ON THE PROWL: Penn State end Jim Schwab eludes a Georgia Tech tackler and rambles 11 yards with a Galen Hall pass in the second quarter of State's 30-15 victory over the Engineers. A senior, Schwab played his last game as a Lion, but he's highly regarded by the Philadelphia Eagles, who drafted him 14th in the NFL meeting in December.

Hall Leads Lions—

for a touchdown. Gursky had a step on Billy Williamson, Tech's fleet halfback, but as he dove for the ball five yards into the end zone, Williamson was draped around his neck. When the Lion halfback rolled from the grass he had the ball in his right hand.

Roger Kochman's catch of Hall's second TD aerial was just as spectacular. Three times Kochman cut down the sidelines but Hall threw to the short receiver. The fourth time Kochman had two steps on defensive back Auer, and Hall threw long.

The ball sailed by Auer's outstretched hands and Kochman caught it over his head in the corner of the end zone. Seconds later Don Jonas booted his second extra point of the afternoon to put State in front for keeps, 14-9.

Powell's catch of Hall's third TD pass in the third quarter wasn't spectacular in itself, but a nation-wide TV audience and the Gator Bowl crowd got a laugh out of the little halfback's dance routine into the end zone.

Tech came back for a touchdown early in the fourth period to narrow the score to 20-15. Sophomore quarterback Billy Lothridge hit end Ted Davis with a 25-yard pass for the big gainer. On the next play Auer fumbled a pitchout, picked it up, reversed his field and outran half of State's team 14 yards for a touchdown.

Then, with Tech bottled up in its own territory late in the game and needing six yards for a first down, the usually conservative Dodd instructed Lothridge to fake a punt and pass.

The play didn't click and State had the ball on the Tech 10-yard line. Four plays later Jonas booted a 16-yard field goal and State led, 23-15.

On the first play after the subsequent kickoff Jim Schwab intercepted a Stan Gann pass and State again had the ball on the Tech 10. This time the Lions got a TD, as Torris cracked over from the one with just over a minute left to play.

Jonas' extra point was good and the Lions had doubled the score on the Rambling Wrecks.

O'Hora Says Lion Tackles Sparked Team

Penn State line coach Jim O'Hora thinks he may have a partial answer to why the Lions ripped their last three opponents for 111 points, almost as much as their total for the first eight games on the schedule (150).

O'Hora thinks that one of the main reasons for State scoring 34 points against Holy Cross, 47 against Pitt and 30 against Georgia Tech in the last three games of the season was the rapid improvement of the starting tackles, Jim Smith and Charlie Sieminski.

"We didn't really start to click until our last three games," O'Hora said in State's locker room after the Georgia Tech win, "and about that time Jim and Charlie started to open up."

"They're both big boys and with each game their agility and mastery of details improved. With their improvement I'd say they had to rate with the best pair of tackles we've had at State."

Gator Bowl Sidelights

Above the bedlam of Penn State's dressing room after the convincing 30-15 Gator Bowl victory over Georgia Tech, Rip Engle called this year's squad his greatest team. "In view of these last few games—and when we're in good physical shape—I'd have to call this the greatest team I've ever coached," he said. "Quite a few Lions thought that Tech was a bit too sure of itself. 'Too cocky? I think so,'" said Lion captain Jim Smith. "I'll tell you one thing, they found out what it's like to get hit. . . ." An informal locker room poll of the Lions on the roughest team they faced this year produced some startling answers. West Virginia was at the top of the list, with Syracuse next. Georgia Tech wasn't mentioned. . . . Dave Robinson.

the first Negro to play in the Gator Bowl in its 17-year history, said he was nervous at the outset of the game; but that it didn't take him long to relax. "I'd like to say that Bobby Dodd and his crew should be congratulated," Robbie told a mob of sports writers after the game. "At least when I was in the game, there were 11 gentlemen from Tech on the field. I had a few anxious moments, but nothing ever happened. . . ." In regular season play Tech lost three games, and strangely enough those were the only times it lost the flip of the coin. When Tech won the flip against State, a roar went up from the partisan crowd. The final score just goes to prove that determination and the will to win will ruin a lucky streak any day in the week.
