

Weather Forecast:
Rain,
Snow

The Daily Collegian

FOR A BETTER PENN STATE

A Plan
Is Needed
—see page 4

VGL 62, No. 53

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA., SATURDAY MORNING, JANUARY 6, 1962

FIVE CENTS

French Ministers Plan Secret Methods to Stop Algerian Rebel Terror

PARIS (AP) — Government ministers worked yesterday on secret measures to smother terrorism flaming over the Algerian issue in Algeria and metropolitan France. A government spokesman said the measures will be stern.

The ministers considered methods to cope with both Moslem nationalist rebels and the rightist French Secret Army Organization, an underground opponent of President Charles de Gaulle's plan to let the North African territory decide its own future.

Both have stepped up their hit-and-run tactics with gun, knife and grenade since the holidays.

The toll since Jan. 7, as compiled unofficially, mounted to 80 dead and more than 150 wounded through Algeria. And French leftists sounded warnings against a Fascist takeover.

Communists published a call for a demonstration Saturday in front of their Paris headquarters. They appealed to all those "who do not want to live in a Fascist country" to join in.

Bullets wounded a guard at the party headquarters Thursday night.

Three persons were killed and 10 wounded yesterday in a new flareup of fighting in Algeria, principally in the tinderboxes of Algiers and Oran.

Government headquarters in Algiers announced 237 members of the secret army were arrested in November and December. But that was before the latest violence began.

A government document ominously noted that the secret army has set up a "certain number" of special commando groups. It said a unit of about 150 men at Blida, near Algiers, had been assigned to take over assigned strategic points in the event of a new putsch.

In both Oran and Algiers, secret army "general mobilization orders" were pasted on walls. They bore the signature of ex-Gen. Raoul Salan, a fugitive sentenced to death for his part in the April putsch in Algiers.

Lawrence Asks Aid For West College

By CAROL KUNKLEMAN
Gov. David L. Lawrence said yesterday that he hopes state aid will be given to college students in Western Pennsylvania. State aid could be extended, he said, on the same basis as his proposed expansion aid program for Temple University in the eastern part of the state.

Lawrence, who spoke to Washington, D.C. newsmen about his ideas for higher education in Pennsylvania, said greater opportunities might be offered through enlarging a Penn State center in the western part of the state.

In proposing more state aid for Temple, Lawrence said that additional subsidies would reduce tuition costs for Pennsylvanians and result in admission of 900 more students.

He discounted fears that increasing subsidies to Temple would decrease funds for Penn State and the 14 state-owned colleges. He said his budget recommendations showed that.

In the presentation of his proposed annual budget of $1 billion Lawrence recommended that a $20 million appropriation be given to the University.

President Eric A. Walker has requested a $24 million appropriation. He will appear before a joint hearing of the State Senate and House appropriation committees Jan. 16 to formally ask for the increased funds.

Representatives from Drexel Institute of Technology, the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Pennsylvania and Temple University are also scheduled to appear sometime during the hearings. All these schools now receive state aid.

Sen. Jo Hays, D-Centre, said yesterday he is "very unhappy" about Gov. David L. Lawrence's recommended subsidy for the University. Hays said, however, that he will reserve any further judgements on the situation until a later date.

"I have no reactions to report on the feeling in Harrisburg about the appropriation," he said.

He returned to his State College office yesterday after attending this week's opening session of the legislature.

"I knew about a week beforehand that the governor would ask for more aid to Temple," Hays stated, "however, I didn't know the exact percentages or that Temple's share would be so much greater."

Lawrence's recommendation would give the University a 17 per cent increase in state aid. Hays said, while Pitt, Penn and Drexel could receive a 15 per cent increase in funds.

Temple, on the other hand, could receive a 74 per cent increase in funds according to the governor's present proposals, he said.

Walker has not made any direct comment about the proposed Temple expansion plan. He has been urging that an independent State Council of Higher Education be formed to direct the "orderly development of educational opportunity in Pennsylvania."

"My position remains unchanged from a year ago last May when I told the Governor's Committee on Education at a public hearing that Pennsylvania badly needed a coordinating agency to provide sound planning within the framework of a consistent statewide policy for higher education in the commonwealth," he stated.

He said the council would watch the use of state and institutional resources increase the degree of cooperation among the different institutions of higher education and improve the quality of collegiate and university programs within Pennsylvania.

Total Enrolled At University Nears 21,000

The total University enrollment for the winter term may reach a final figure of more than 21,000, Robert G. Bernreuter, dean of admissions and registrar, said yesterday.

This figure would include full and part time students enrolled at all the commonwealth campuses.

A total of 15,872 students registered at the University Park campus by the close of winter-term registration Thursday.

Bernreuter said the total, which is incomplete, is 1,237 above the total recorded at the close of registration for the spring semester last February and down 1,213 from the comparable figure for the fall term.

As many as 2,000 more students, the majority of them enrolling for continuing education classes, may be expected to register for the winter term, he said.

PRETTY SMILING FACES were the order of the evening last night as formal sorority rush got underway with the first round of chatter dates. Here the Delta Gammas entertain a group of rushees in their suite. The girls were treated to sorority songs and a friendly atmosphere at each of their 40-minute stops.

Jan. 15 Set As Deadline For Drop-Add

Jan. 15 is the deadline for filing drop-adds, Robert M. Koser, associate registrar, said yesterday.

The procedure for filing drop-adds is the same as in the past, he said. Students must first obtain a signed change of schedule form from their adviser.

The form must be taken first to the department of the course to be dropped where the pink course card is obtained, Koser said.

The student must then obtain a pink and white course card from the department of the course to be added, he said.

These three items must be presented by the student in order to file the drop-add in 4 Willard.

Students may make changes in their spring term schedules until sometime later this month, Koser said. The deadlines for these changes, which will vary according to term standing, will be announced next week, he said.

Prof's Will Leaves Stocks to University

An investment-minded faculty member who made $4,728-a-year at the height of his teaching career has left the University $178,750 in stocks.

Walter Thomas, for 40 years a member of the University faculty, died two years ago at the age of 79. He had retired in 1950 as professor emeritus of plant nutrition, and spent his last 10 years in Florida.

McKay Donkin, University treasurer, said that the stocks had been turned over to the University by the Thomas' estate with instructions to use the income to establish scholarships and fellowships in the Department of Horticulture. Thomas, a native of Wales, came to this country from Canada in 1910, made the acquaintance of the late William Frear, professor of experimental agricultural chemistry, and joined him on the faculty at a salary of $1,200 a year. His salary reached $4,728 when he retired 40 years later.

Attorney John T. Taylor, executor of the estate, said Thomas apparently began to develop interest in the stock market during the 1920's, added to these investments through the depression, and upon retirement owned shares in many of the nation's corporations.

His investments proved extraordinarily profitable, the attorney added, "and this income combined with frugal living enabled him to build an estate that was unusual for a man of his means."

1,080 Coeds to Participate in Formal Panhel Rush

About 1,080 rushees will participate in formal sorority rushing, Mrs. Nancy M. Vanderpool, panhellenic advisor said yesterday.

Approximately 1,598 women registered for sorority rushing in the fall and attended open houses. "Most of the drop-outs seem to be due to rushees failing to make the required grade-point average," she said.

Collegian Business Staff

Mason Chessler, junior in arts and letters from Philadelphia, and Martha Gress, senior in journalism from Wellesley Hills, Mass., have been appointed circulation manager and national ad manager respectively for The Daily Collegian.

New business staff heads, who will serve for the winter term only, are Ralph Friedman, credit manager; Kathy Notopolous, assistant credit manager; and Kathleen Ibbotson, classified ad manager.

An All-University average of 2.00 for upperclass women and a term average of 2.3 for freshmen plus attendance at all the open houses was required for rushees to register for formal rush.

Formal rush began last night with the first round of chatter dates which will continue today. Rushees were permitted to accept each suite.

Between 9:30 and 10:30 a.m. tomorrow in the Hetzel Union lounge rushees may pick up invitations to the second round of chatter dates. At this time they will be permitted to accept six invitations.

This round will take place tomorrow afternoon and rushees will spend an hour in each of the six sorority suites. During the first round, rushees spent 40 minutes in each suite.

The next rushing event is Bermuda Junctions which will take place Wednesday.

Occasional Rain, Mild Weather Expected Today

The sleet and freezing rain that began yesterday evening was expected to change to rain before dawn as temperatures rise above freezing.

Occasional rain and mild weather is indicated for today, and temperatures are expected to reach 42 degrees this afternoon.

The arrival of colder air late today is expected to change the weather to snow. Snow flurries windy and much colder weather is forecast for tonight. A low of 18 is expected.

Tomorrow should be partly cloudy, breezy and very cold. The maximum temperature tomorrow afternoon will be near 25 degrees.