

36 Seniors Designated as Nominees For Annual Collegiate 'Who's Who'

By SANDY YAGGI

Thirty-six members of the senior class have been selected as the University's nominees to "Who's Who Among Students In American Colleges and Universities" George L. Donovan, coordinator of student affairs, announced yesterday.

The method of selection was explained by SGA President Dennis Foianini. "Since it is Mr. Donovan's responsibility to submit the list, he asked me to help in the compilation of nominees," Foianini said.

The La Vie staff gave us a hand in selecting the people," Foianini said.

The staff asked a group of about 15 officers of campus organizations who were seniors to prepare a list of people who they felt should appear in the La Vie's "Personalities" section, Foianini said. "Except in a few instances, the names submitted were the ones heading this list which included about 60 people, Foianini said.

"WE DID NOT have a committee because we felt that this list gave a fairly good cross section of the well-known and influential members of the senior class," Foianini said.

The nominees are the following: Duane Alexander, pre med, Annapolis, Md.; John Black, arts and letters, Lancaster; Joan Cavanagh, business administration, Washington; Dennis Eisman, arts and letters, Philadelphia; Marianne Ellis, arts and letters, Washington, D.C.

Dennis Foianini, petroleum and natural gas engineering, State College; Marjorie Ganter, arts and letters, Bethel Park; Earl Gershenow, arts and letters, Fort Monroe, Va.; Diane Gimber, secondary education, Norfolk Va.; David Grubbs, labor management relations, Bethlehem.

Barbara Hackman, arts and letters, Landisville; Robert Harrison, pre-med, Shamokin; Ervin Hill, aeronautical engineering, Hatboro.

WAYNE HILINSKI, journalism, Philadelphia; Jay Huffman, business administration, Clairton; Charles Jacques Jr., secondary education, Natrona Heights; Robert Mitinger, arts and letters, Greensburg; Spencer McGraw, business administration, Norwood; Barbara Newman, elementary education, Philadelphia; Richard Pigossi, electrical engineering, Pittsburgh; Alan Pollen, psychology, Philadelphia.

Roland King Jr., arts and letters, Newport, N.J.; Philip Steinhauer, business administration, Kingston; Mary Swed, secondary education, Paterson, N.J.; Marilyn Teichholtz, arts and letters, Massapequa Park, N.Y.; Janice Wagner, home economics, Shoemakersville; Gregor Weiss, physical education, Ridgefield, N.J.; Nancy Williams, secondary education, Drexel Hill.

Ruth Rilling, arts and letters, Philadelphia; John Witmer, arts and letters, Doylestown; Robert Dufner, business administration, Pittsburgh; George Haney Jr., business administration, Haverstown; Susan Houston, elementary education, Harrisburg; Gerald Logue, engineering science, Parkersburg; Richard Moyer, agricultural and biological chemistry, Chalfont; Herbert Nurick, arts and letters, Harrisburg.

their convictions, would do so.

"I think the faculty has given the students a clear incentive to live by those values as well as say them in words," he said.

Dean of Women Dorothy J. Lipp said that she supported the action but that a definite deadline might cause retrenching among national sorority organizations and inhibit progress.

SHE SAID THAT at present there is only one sorority out of the 28 on campus which retains a restrictive clause in its constitution. This represents great progress in the last 10 years, she added.

Dean of Men Frank J. Simes said that since only fraternities which moved on campus after 1950 were required to submit copies of their constitutions to his office, there is no sure way of knowing how many fraternities among the 57 on campus would be affected by this legislation. However, he conjectured only three or four have such clauses.

Robert G. Bernreuter, special assistant to the president for student affairs and secretary of the Senate, said this action is "just another step in a program for helping students to be more tolerant of each other."

Budget Analysis--

general expenses amounted to 4.9 cents; University libraries costs were 2.0 cents.

"The cost of student services rose in the last year because of the addition of such services as residence hall counseling," Kenderworthy observed, "but our administrative and general expenses are low as compared to other universities."

Per Cent Voting Requirement May Be Waived by Committee

The political party referendum will probably not be bound by the 20 per cent turnout requirement of the old SGA constitution, Laurence H. Lattman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Student Affairs, said yesterday.

Lattman said that in all likelihood the committee would accept the results of the balloting regardless of the percentage of students who vote on the issue.

THE REFERENDUM WILL decide if political parties will be permitted on campus for future election campaigns. It was put on the ballot at the insistence of the committee after a conflict developed between two groups of students on the future of campus political parties.

At a joint meeting of the Senate Committee on Student Affairs and the Committee on Organization Control Richard Pigossi, president of IFC, Robert Fry, president of TIM and George Henning, president of MRC testified against campus political parties and urged their elimination.
