

Governor Skirts Encampment Set for Mont Alto Budget Issue

A short anecdote contained Gov. David L. Lawrence's only direct reference to the University budget request at his press conference with college journalists Thursday in Harrisburg.

The conference, attended by 80 students, was held in the governor's reception room adjoining the House of Representatives chamber in the state capitol.

Lawrence said he recently went to a sports banquet in Pittsburgh and was seated next to Bob Mitinger, end on State's 1961 Gator Bowl squad.

THE GOVERNOR said Mitinger told him he did not want to spoil the informality of the evening, but asked when the state was going to send more money "out our way."

Lawrence then shot the five Daily Collegian reporters present a knowing glance as if to say, "You see, I know you. You're all alike up there."

Three state secretaries—administration, budget and commerce—sat on Lawrence's left and occasionally fielded technical questions from the campus reporters.

Questioners repeatedly probed the political picture for this fall's election. U.S. Senator Joseph S.

Clark, who joined the governor at the rostrum for part of the press conference, was also a target of requests for predictions, but declined comment.

CLARK DID SAY that the bill for Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Missouri to regain one seat each in the U.S. House of Representatives should pass in the House.

"I never attempt to prognosticate what will happen in the other body," he added. Clark was referring to the U.S. Senate.

David H. Kurtzman, secretary of the state administration, replied to a question from a Collegian reporter on possible elimination of the four per cent textbook tax. A bill on this subject has been introduced in the state legislature.

KURTZMAN SAID that there is a chance that textbooks purchased from a college bookstore could be exempted. He was reminded that some schools, such as Penn State, have no bookstore and their students want taxes dropped on books purchased from retail dealers.

"In this case, the question arises as to what a textbook is," he said. There would have to be some clarification on this topic before predicting whether tax exemptions could be made, Kurtzman added.

Student encampment will be held at the Mont Alto campus next fall. Encampment, a yearly evaluation of the philosophic aspects of student government, had been held at Mont Alto, the University's forestry school, until last fall.

Undergraduate Student Government President Dennis Foianini moved student encampment from Mont Alto to the University Park campus to enable more students to take part and to save on costs. At the final encampment meeting in September, it was suggested that next year's meeting be held someplace other than University Park. This suggestion was approved by the USG Congress Thursday night.

THE CONGRESS also approved encampment chairman Nancy Williams' plan which requires the USG president to appoint next year's encampment chairman no later than the second week of the spring term. "This might mean that the present USG president will appoint the encampment chairman for next year," Miss Williams told the Congress.

The Congress also approved a proposed study to examine methods of improving the elections commission by determining a method of positive identification of town independent men and the possibility of establishing a floating poll for IFC and TIM voters.

MISS WILLIAMS, who also headed the elections commission, said a poll of this type might be carried on the back of a truck so that it could be moved around to the actual living areas of IFC and TIM voters.

She said voter turnout in these two areas was the poorest on campus. "This was due in part to the fact that polls could not be brought directly to them," she said. Polls for the other voting districts, in the residence halls, were located in each area dining hall.

The Congress also gave the elections commission chairman the power to approve all campaign materials used by groups campaigning in an election involving issues other than those of candidates, party platforms or party ideals. Under this set-up the elections commission head would have direct control over all materials used in campaigning on referenda.

Corps Test Set for Feb. 17; Examination Takes Six Hours

Tests for those interested in joining the Peace Corps will be given at 8:30 a.m. Feb. 17 in the Civil Service room at the State College post office.

All U.S. citizens over 18 may apply. Married persons with dependents over 18 are eligible if both husband and wife volunteer.

The six-hour examination includes tests in general comprehension of the applicant's field of specialization, language aptitudes, governmental policy and psychological adjustment.

THOSE TAKING the test should have a reserve seat slip which they receive after submitting the volunteer questionnaire to Washington. People who have not answered the questionnaire may do so at the time of the examination.

Volunteers are selected for training on the basis of the questionnaire and the entrance test. They then enter a three month training program in the United States.

The curriculum consists of U.S. history, international relations, studies of the culture and policies of the host country, language training, physical conditioning, health instruction and specialized instruction.

600 Tickets Remain For 'Witness' Play

Approximately 600 tickets remain for the Players' production of "Witness for the Prosecution" at 8 tonight in Schwab.

Tickets are now on sale at the Hetzel Union desk for $1.25.

The drama concerns the trial of a young Englishman charged with the murder of a rich, elderly woman.

The play is directed by Walter H. Walters, head of the Department of Theatre Arts, and features Warren Furres, graduate student in theatre arts from Allentown, and Jeanne Beagle, graduate student in theatre arts from Mahanoy City.

Hodges to Discuss Competition

"A World of Competition" will be the topic of the lecture by Luther H. Hodges, secretary of commerce, at 3 p.m. Sunday in Schwab in the first of the University Lecture Series of the term.

Approximately 200 student tickets are still available from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. today at the Hetzel Union desk. About 30 non-student tickets remain at $1.25.

A ten minute question period will follow Hodges' talk after which a reception will be held in the Hetzel Union lounge. The public is invited.

HODGES WAS appointed secretary of commerce last January after serving six years as governor of North Carolina. Before entering politics, he served as vice president of Marshall Field and Company.

Hodges' job, as defined by statute is "to foster, promote and develop the foreign and domestic commerce" of the United States.

According to an article by Arthur Herzog, free lance writer, in October, 1961, his immediate problem on taking office was the stimulation of U.S. business in the midst of a recession. Herzog said that the end of this recession may in part be due to the "stabilizing and optimistic" influence of Hodges.

According to the article, Hodges has a "flair for showmanship probably unequalled in the Kennedy administration." At one time, according to the article when Hodges was governor of North Carolina he posed in his underwear to promote the textile industry.

HODGES FIRST official act

after his appointment as secretary of commerce was to ring the buzzers on his desk to see who would come running. Herzog said.

Hodges, born in 1896 in Pittsylvania County Virginia, was one of nine children of a Virginia sharecropper. When he was two, his family moved across the North Carolina state line to Leaksville, a textile mill town where Hodges went to public school.

A Presbyterian minister persuaded Hodges to attend college. After working his way through four years of college at the University of North Carolina, Hodges took a job as secretary to the manager of a group of mills in Leaksville. The mills were a division of Marshall Field and Company.

CORPSMEN WHO are given final assignments participate in a second phase of training in the host country. They are instructed by native teachers on the traditions, culture and language of the country.

While in training, volunteers receive room and board, medical care, training materials and an expense allowance of $2 a day. Corpsmen overseas receive money for food, housing, clothing and expenses. At the end of their service they are paid $75 for each month of work.

Heller to Exhibit Prints

Jules Heller, director of the School of Arts, has been invited to exhibit a lithograph, "Landscape for Nuclear Living," along with leading artists throughout the country and abroad, at The Print Club in Philadelphia, Monday to March 2.

7 Disciplined for Parts In Shoplifting Escapade

Seven students involved in a shoplifting incident were penalized by the Senate Sub-committee on Discipline this week, Leroy S. Austin, associate dean of men, said yesterday.

A freshman who admitted taking an item of merchandise from a local market in order to perform a prank in his residence hall was given suspended suspension until the end of the spring term.

Six other students, two sophomores and four freshmen, were placed on office probation until the end of the spring term for their part in the incident.

A STUDENT ON suspended suspension cannot hold an executive position in any student activity and is subject to immediate suspension from the University in the event of any further misbehavior.

Office probation of a period during which the dean of men's office closely observes the student to prevent further misbehavior.

In a second case this week, the sub-committee placed a freshman on disciplinary probation until the end of the spring term for stealing a canvas Bloodmobile sign which had been erected at the foot of the Mall.

The student must pay to have the sign cleaned before restoration, Leisure said.

A student on disciplinary probation cannot hold office or be a committee member of any University activity.
