USG to Review Elections Code

A parliamentary maneuver which would bring the elections code to the floor for a vote may be attempted at the regular meeting of the USG Congress at 7:30 tonight in 203 Hetzel Union Building.

The procedure would call for the suspension of the rules of the Congress while the elections code is discussed and action taken on it. Two-thirds of the Congressmen must approve a motion to suspend the rules.

AT LAST WEEK'S meeting the code was ruled to be an addition to the by-laws and as such would have to be read in its entirety twice before it is brought to a vote. The code was presented last week but was not read completely because many Congressmen questioned parts of it.

During the week, the code has been rewritten in an attempt to clarify the points questioned by Congresswoman Ann Morris, North Halls representative and chairman of the committee which drew up the code.

The appointments of David Sigman to head the judicial committee, Ruth Falk to chair the text tax committee, and Gomer Williams to head the appropriations investigation committee will be presented to the Congress.

Sigman, senior in psychology from Philadelphia, is interested in disciplinary systems on campus and should provide the leadership needed for this position, USG President Dennis Foianini said last night.

RUTH FALK, sophomore in liberal arts from Philadelphia, was appointed to head the text tax committee because she has always done a good job when working for student government, Foianini said.

Gomer Williams, junior in business administration from Harrisburg, was appointed to head the appropriations investigations committee because of his experience working in this field. Williams led the student campaign last spring to get a higher appropriation for the University.

THE CONGRESS will also hear reports from the chairman of the AM-FM radio signal converter committee, the public relations agency and from Kurt Simons, editor of the USG newspaper.

An amendment to the USG Constitution to change the methods of filling vacant seats will be presented to the Congress by George Gordon, North Halls representative and Rules Committee chairman.

The amendment provides for an immediate election to fill a vacant seat instead of waiting until the beginning of a new term to have the special election.

Day of Space 'Auto' Foreseen by Glenn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr. yesterday foresaw a time when high-powered space "automobiles" will travel the skies, changing direction or going from one orbit to another at the driver's will.

They'll have to be vastly more powerful than the little capsule Friendship 7 in which he orbited the earth three times last week, he said. So there is no prospect of a traffic jam in space any time soon.

Glenn said the little hydrogen-peroxide jets on his capsule could change only its attitude—roll, pitch or yaw—and could not alter its path. The more powerful retro, or braking, rockets could only slow him down to take him out of orbit and send him falling back to earth.

BUT WHEN tremendously more powerful spacecraft are built, a man can go cruising about, steering wherever his curiosity dictates, or from one orbit to another as if in a sky auto, he said.

In the course of the day, Glenn, in response to legislators, questions, made a moving confession of religious faith and told a bit more of the mysterious "fireflies" he saw in the three days he experienced on a single flight.

At the Senate committee hearing Sen. Alexander Wiley, R-Wis., asked Glenn for his thoughts on religious faith.

After communing with himself for a moment, Glenn said quietly: "I have some very definite feelings on that."

"I cannot say that while I was in orbit I sat there and prayed. I was pretty busy."

HE SAID a man should live as though every day might be his last. He personally, he said, falls so far short of his, that it is "pitiful," but he always comes back the next day and tries again.

He always felt, he said, that religion should not be of the "fire-engine type"—a man should not call on faith only in emergency "and then put God back in the woodwork for a 24-hour period."

"I am trying to live as best I can," he said. "My peace has been made with my Maker for a number of years, so I had no particular worries on that line." As for the "fireflies" seen at sunrise outside his capsule window over the Pacific, Glenn told about them again in response to questions. These little luminous objects—ranging from the size of a pinhead to a half inch long—remain a mystery to scientists. But Glenn did add one bit to the public's picture of them.

At the suggestion of James E. Webb, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Glenn indicated there might be a very long belt of these objects in the skies—unless of course they were emanations of some sort from the capsule.

House, Senate OK $20 Million

The University's appropriation bill made its last appearance in the state legislature as the House and Senate unanimously accepted Gov. David B. Lawrence's $20 million allocation recommendation.

Correction

The incident of disorderly conduct for which two men were disciplined by the dean of men's office last week did not take place at the College Co-op on Nittany Avenue as reported in yesterday's edition of The Daily Collegian.

The incident took place at an apartment on S. Atherton St. Daniel R. Leasure, assistant dean of men, said yesterday. The women living at the apartment are not students, he explained.

The bill has been sent to the Governor for final approval.

"I have every reason to believe that the Governor will sign the bill into effect," Sen. Jo Hays, D-Centre, said last night.

THE BILL PROVIDES a $20 million allocation in state funds to the University. It also allots the University eight per cent of all state tax income which exceeds the estimated revenue for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1962.

Two weeks ago Hays said the total excess amounts to $5 million, at present.

The University originally requested $24 million in funds from the state. President Eric A. Walker made this request to a hearing of the joint Senate-House Appropriations committee Jan. 16.

HAYS, A MEMBER of the appropriations committee, predicted after the Walker hearing that "there isn't one chance in 1,000 that the University will be allocated its appropriation request of $24 million."

Lawrence at that time reiterated his statement that he would veto any bill unbalancing his recommended $1 billion general fund budget, which allocated $20 million to the University.

During legislative consideration of the appropriation bill, several attempts to increase the allocation were made by Rep. Eugene R. Fulmer, Sen. Harold E. Fluck and Hays. All efforts except for Hays' tax excess bill were defeated.

WALKER SAID Saturday, before final legislative action, that the $20 million allocation recommended by Lawrence would put the University "in a tight squeeze and stymie many things we want to do at the University."

Snow Flurries Expected Today

The intensely cold arctic air that has produced near zero temperatures in the north-central states for the past three days began moving eastward in force yesterday.

The last in a series of storm systems, which brought more than an inch of rain to this area during the past few days, moved off the Atlantic coast yesterday.

It intensified rapidly last night, and the cold air from the mid-west was drawn eastward behind it.

SNOW FLURRIES and gusty winds accompanied the influx of the colder air last night. Temperatures early today were forecast to be near 20 degrees.

Today should be mostly cloudy and much colder with snow flurries and gusty winds. A high of only 28 degrees is expected.

Tonight should be clear and very cold. The low will be near 10 degrees.

Partly cloudy and quite cold weather is indicated for tomorrow. A high of 26 is likely.

Temperatures in the heart of the arctic air in the north-central states ranged from 30 to 40 below zero yesterday morning to 10 to 15 below yesterday afternoon.

Publication Renewal Defeated at Penn

(See related editorial)

A recommendation that The Daily Pennsylvanian, University of Pennsylvania's student newspaper, resume daily publication was defeated yesterday at a meeting held to discuss the paper's status, Michael Varet, business manager, said last night.

In negotiations yesterday representatives of The Daily Pennsylvanian and of the Men's Student Government met with Edward J. Janosik, who has been serving as mediator in the dispute, and agreed on a statement which was then referred to the student government body and to the newspaper's board of editors.

THE EDITORS approved the statement but the student government defeated it by a vote of 16-1. If passed by both groups, the statement would have been sent to the University's administration with a recommendation that the ban on publication be lifted.

The joint statement which Varet said involved great compromises on both sides read as follows:

"The Men's Student Government feels that the suspension of The Daily Pennsylvanian has forcibly called to its editor's attention the fact that the Men's Student Government has been dissatisfied with the quality of journalism, evidenced up to this point.

"THE ELECTION of Michael S. Brown as editor-in-chief is recognized with fervent hope that The Daily Pennsylvanian will strive to improve its journalistic standards."

Following the defeat of the recommendation, the members of The Daily Pennsylvanian staff issued a statement expressing its feelings toward the decision:

"By its irresponsible action tonight, the student government has undoubtedly demonstrated that its sole concern is in imposing its policies on The Daily Pennsylvanian. This is clearly censorship in its most objectionable form. The Daily Pennsylvanian agreed to a compromise which was approved by the government negotiators and the faculty mediator.

"SINCE THE administration originally imposed the suspension, it is now clearly its responsibility to lift it. If this is not done, the administration will be continuing to deny freedom of expression on this campus."

The Daily Pennsylvanian receives about $17,000 a year from the University toward its $53,000 budget for the running of the newspaper, Varet said. These funds are allocated from student (Continued on page eight)
