

Party Nominations Procedure Outlined

Allan Feingold, Elections Commission chairman, explained the nominating procedures of the three political parties last night.

Both Liberal and Campus parties will hold only final nominations while University party will hold both preliminary and final nominations, Feingold said.

Final nominations for the three parties are slated for April 15. The parties will hold final registrations Sunday night. University party will also hold preliminary nominations at this time.

MICHAEL DZVONIK, University party chairman, explained last night that according to the party constitution, candidates must be nominated in the preliminary nominations and elected to run on the slate at the final nomination meeting.

The purpose of this system, Dzvonic said, is to give the party members a chance to know the candidates before voting, and to give the candidates time to campaign for the party nomination.

PARTIES WILL be nominating candidates for USG president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and senior, junior and sophomore class presidents.

Regarding the selection of the Elections Commission for this year, Feingold said there has been a misunderstanding in that past members of the commission are not aware that once they have been appointed to the commission they are members until they resign. He said about 40 of the 110 members of the commission showed up for the meeting Sunday night.

OF THE 100 applications he made available only about 25 have been returned, he said, and he needs 30 more members for an effective Elections Commission.

Feingold also said there will be another meeting Sunday at 6:45 p.m. in 214 Boucke. Following the meeting the commission will help in party registration and will hold applicant interviews. All members and applicants must attend, Feingold said.

Advanced Placement

Ohio State Program Grants Frosh Credit

By ROCHELLE MICHAELS

(This is the second in a series of articles describing systems of advanced placement—the granting of undergraduate credits to high school seniors upon college entrance—now used by universities in this country.)

A freshman entering The Ohio State University who has completed his placement testing may earn up to 30 hours of credit through a series of proficiency tests.

NEARLY 30 departments at Ohio State now authorize such examination in one or more courses at the freshman level. The examinations are administered during the orientation program.

The University's counseling and testing center states, "One who has had exceptionally good preparation in high school, or through outside study of the subject matter, should consider the advantages of earning credits by examination." The program especially invites "superior" high school students (those with a B or better in any given subject) to apply for the examinations.

A high level of achievement on the placement examination is necessary in order to take any proficiency tests.

THERE ARE TWO types of tests which are administered for credit. "Centralized" testing, offered in such courses as history, English, introductory sciences and music appreciation, consists of a two to three hour objective and essay exam. They are administered by the University, rather than by the individual department.

"Departmental" testing is usually a practicum exam. Accounting, education, fine arts, language and applied music are examples of courses which require this type of test. Some courses require both types of exams before credit is granted.

6 Policy Revisions Adopted by AWS

Six project and policy recommendations were adopted and one defeated last night by the Association of Women Students Senate.

The recommendations originated in a retreat for local delegates to the eastern regional Intercollegiate Association of Women Students conference held here during the winter term recess.

AWS Senate last night approved two 2 a.m. permissions for all women students for IFC-Panhal Jazz Festival tomorrow and Saturday nights. Late permissions were also approved for Senior Ball weekend, May 4 and 5.

Approval to grant a 2 a.m. permission for Saturday, April 28, was tabled for further discussion at the AWS Senate meeting next week. The Spring Week Carnival will be held that night.

The first of the approved proposals, presented by Marcia Chernosky, retreat chairman, included establishing a committee to investigate means to improve "the intellectual climate" on campus. Committee members appointed are Miss Chernosky, Peggy Mitchell, Barbara Oliver, Sara Peterson and Sandra Wall.

A CENTRAL project, as yet unspecified, to aid the World University Service was also approved. Barbara Baer, sophomore in arts and letters from Mount Vernon, N.Y., will serve as project chairman.

A suggestion concerning AWS problems was also adopted. AWS will now study methods to obtain better representation of student interests on its community councils and will seek to promote better relations with residence hall junior residents.

AWS Senate also approved a recommendation that it work actively to stimulate student interest in world affairs. This proposal should serve as a guidepost to future AWS action, Miss Oliver, Atherton AWS Council, said.

BARBARA FEIT, AWS first president, also recommended that AWS promote closer relations between its legislative and judicial branches through an education program on each body's function. (Continued on page twelve)

Liberian Corps Projects Begin

A new Peace Corps project in the Republic of Liberia has been announced by Sargent Shriver, Peace Corps director.

Approximately 70 volunteers are scheduled to begin teaching in Liberian secondary schools in September, in response to a request from the nation's President William V. S. Tubman.

The volunteers will teach English, French, science, mathematics, art, music and vocational education. They will be staffing new schools and acting as temporary replacements for teachers who are receiving further training under Liberia's educational development program.

Selection of candidates for the project began recently. The volunteers will begin a two-month training program in June at a United States university. The name of the university has not yet been announced.
