

UNSEASONABLY WARM WEATHER encouraged flocks of sunbathers to soak up the tanning—or in many cases, burning—rays yesterday. These coeds are seen sunning behind Simmons Hall. Yesterday's sunbathing began as early as 8:30 a.m. near some residence halls. The sun worshippers may continue to dot campus lawns today if the temperature remains above normal counts for April.

6 Men Disciplined By Senate Group

A sophomore and a freshman have been suspended from the University for various offenses, Daniel R. Leasure, assistant to the dean of men, said yesterday.

These two cases and four others were reviewed by the Senate Subcommittee on Discipline at its weekly meeting Thursday.

The sophomore, who was suspended until the fall term 1962, had violated three University regulations — consumption of alcoholic beverages, disrespectful behavior and the alteration of a matriculation card, Leasure said.

THE STUDENT was found intoxicated last week by a State College policeman, he said, adding that while enroute to the police station in the officer's patrol car, the student struck the officer several times. Later, police found the student had altered his matriculation card.

The freshman was suspended for shoplifting books in a State College store recently, Leasure said. This was the 20th shoplifting case to be considered by the subcommittee since the fall term. In 18 of those cases, the student involved was suspended.

A SOPHOMORE was placed on suspended suspension until the end of the fall term 1962 for stealing a number of signs posted at various points on campus, Leasure said. The student had stored the stolen signs in his apartment for two weeks and then, assisted by his roommate, disposed of them, he added.

The roommate was placed on suspended suspension until the end of this term and will remain on disciplinary probation until the end of the fall term 1962.

THE PENALTY of suspended suspension gives the dean of men authority to suspend the student if any further misconduct occurs. A notation of the penalty is also placed on the student's transcript.

The subcommittee also placed a junior on disciplinary probation and a sophomore on office probation both until the end of the fall term 1962. The students had been "extremely disrespectful" and had made obscene comments to a residence hall counselor recently, Leasure added.

Term Survey to Continue

By TONI BARNES

The student opinion survey currently conducted by the Office of Student Affairs Research will be continued next week by mail, Richard E. Stanford, research associate, said last night.

The survey, designed to determine student attitudes on courses, faculty members and the four-term system at the University, will continue "because of obvious student interest," Stanford said.

Stanford explained that letters were sent to about 1,100 students, which represent a cross-sampling of the student body, last week requesting them to report to 119 Osmond on a specific day to fill out the survey questionnaire.

About 800 students reported as directed, Stanford said.

"MANY OF THE students who did not report called the Student Affairs Research Office to explain that the religious holidays had made it impossible for them to report on the day assigned, Stanford explained.

"Because of the student interest, the remaining 300 questionnaires will be sent by mail to those students who were originally contacted, he added.

The questionnaires are to be filled out and returned by mail as soon as possible, Stanford said. A self-addressed-stamped envelope has been included with each questionnaire to facilitate returns, he added.

MRS. GLORIA BERNHEIN, graduate assistant in charge of the survey, said that the written questionnaire will take approximately 30 minutes to complete.

"Graduate students and special students were excluded on both mailing lists, Stanford explained, because the survey is designed to get opinions from about 10 percent of the undergraduates now attending the University."

The questionnaire contains about 156 items, he said, and statistical tabulations on the results will be available around June 1.

The idea for the survey was originated last year by the Student Affairs Advisory Committee "to provide a factual basis of which administrative decisions could be made," Stanford said.

THE RECENT SURVEY is designed to estimate the range of student opinion on many subjects, he said.

"More specific surveys based on results of this preliminary questionnaire will be held next fall," Stanford said.

The fall surveys will deal individually with specific aspects of campus life, courses, and any other area in which there seems to be a major difference in student opinion, he added.

Pigossi Discusses Recommendation On IFC Spring Week Sponsorship

The recommendation that the Interfraternity Council assume management of next year's Spring Week was not made with the intention of making Spring Week solely a fraternity affair, Richard Pigossi, past president of IFC, said last night.

Recommendations of IFC management of Spring Week, elimination of the carnival and resumption of the float parade were made by Pigossi at the IFC meeting Monday night.

The recommendations will be voted on at the next IFC meeting.

"I feel that IFC could do a better job in managing Spring Week because we have more interest in it than any other organization on campus," Pigossi said.

Though the carnival would be eliminated under the present recommendation, a profit could still be shown, he said. Groups entering the float parade would be charged a specified amount of money, he said.

Groups have to make a $25 deposit to enter Spring Week under the present system, Pigossi said. Under his recommendation, the money would not be returned.

Pigossi also said that the scholarships for athletes living in fraternity houses has been increased from $150 to $200 per term.

After this year, no freshman athlete on a scholarship will be permitted to live in a fraternity house, Pigossi said. He said that this decision was made by President Eric A. Walker because it was found that athletes' scholarship suffered when they lived in fraternity houses.

Possible Rain Seen for Tonight; Warm Weather to Continue Today

The chances of rain spoiling this evening's carnival are much less than 50-50.

Showers are forecast to develop in Pennsylvania this afternoon, but they should be well scattered and of short duration.

The unseasonably warm weather that began Wednesday is expected to continue today, and the mercury should reach a high of 88 to 90 degrees this afternoon.

PROVIDED there are no showers or thunderstorms in the area this evening, temperatures will continue pleasantly warm. The mercury is expected to fall slowly during the evening, and it will be near 67 degrees around midnight.

Yesterday was the third warmest day ever observed in this area during April. When the mercury touched 88 degrees shortly after 1 p.m., April 27, 1962 went into the record books as the warmest April day since the mercury hit 90 in 1925.

IF CLOUDINESS hadn't developed during the early afternoon, there is little doubt that bright sunshine would have easily boosted the temperature above the all-time April record.

There is some possibility that this record will be tied or broken today, but increasing moisture will reduce the available sunshine by producing more afternoon cloudiness. The local forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and unseasonably warm temperatures for today. There is a slight chance of a shower or thunderstorm late this afternoon or this evening.

TONIGHT will be partly cloudy and pleasantly warm, and a low of 62 is likely.

Mostly cloudy skies and showers are indicated for tomorrow. Temperatures probably will not be quite as warm as they have been in recent days, and a maximum of 80 is expected.

Campus Patrol to Hold Bicycle Inspection Today

Weather permitting, a third bicycle inspection-registration for University students and staff members will take place today.

The inspection stations will be in Parking Area 46, behind Pollock A, and Parking Area 86, near East Hall. The time of inspection is from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

All bicycles operated on campus or in State College streets must be inspected. The period of registration ends May 28. The University inspection is also effective for borough records.

Inclement weather conditions prevented a complete registration at the two previous inspections.

De Levie Asked to Plan Foreign Study Program

Dagobert de Levie, director of the University Study Abroad Program, has been asked by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction to aid in arranging a similar program for students in the state colleges.

De Levie is now at the University of Cologne with 25 students from the University enrolled in the Study Abroad program.

Charles H. Boehm, state superintendent of public instruction, requested de Levie's assistance in arranging a Junior Year Abroad program for state colleges that would accommodate about 25 students studying German.
