

AWS Approves 3 Rules

Three proposed changes in AWS judicial rules were tentatively approved by AWS Senate last night.

The proposals, presented by Susan Starbird, chairman of the rules revision committee, are:

• One a.m. permissions for women students at the beginning of each term, from the day the residence halls open, up to, but not including, the night before classes begin.

• Informal attire permitted at Saturday night meals.

• A penalty of 10 late-minutes for a woman who comes back to her residence hall early, but forgets to sign in.

Under existing AWS rules, only 1 a.m. travel permissions have been allowed at the beginning of a term. The rules change could possibly allow for six consecutive 1 a.m. permissions, if the opening of a residence hall precedes a weekend, Miss Starbird said.

INFORMAL ATTIRE, defined in the judicial rules as bermuda shorts, slacks, and kilts, but not dungarees, have been allowed in dining halls for breakfasts, lunches every day and the evening meal on Sunday. The proposal would extend the rule to include the evening meal Saturday.

Under present rules, 15-late-minutes are assigned to a woman who arrives in her residence hall early but forgets to sign in. Miss Starbird said the penalty was reduced because the committee felt that it was "unfair for a girl who took the trouble of signing out to receive the same penalty as a girl who deliberately stays for an extra 15 minutes."

The rules changes must be approved by the Dean of Women before they can be presented to AWS for final approval, Miss Starbird said.

AT THE MEETING, Cathleen Creighton, sophomore in secondary education from Murrysville, and Sandra Haberman, sophomore in elementary-kindergarten education from Mt. Vernon, N.J., were named co-chairmen of the AWS elections commission.

In other business, the senate voted to set up a "coed council" with the Men's Residence Council for the summer term.

Spring Week Board Planned

Emil Sos, president of the Interfraternity Council, announced plans last night to establish an advisory board composed of representatives of the student governing bodies to consider plans for next year's Spring Week.

This board, composed of members of IFC, the Panhellenic Council, Men's Residence Council, Association of Women Students and Town Independent Men, would act as an unaffiliated body to aid and advise the Undergraduate Student Government on the interests of the member groups in Spring Week activities, Sos said last night.

After discussing considerations for the Friday and Saturday night events of Spring Week, the board would poll all groups involved in participating in Spring Week to determine their interests and opinions, Sos said. The board would then make recommendations based on the results of the poll, he said.

Carnival Grosses Income of $6,100

The Spring Week carnival grossed an income of about $6,100 from the booths and the concession stands, Robert Polishook, Spring Week chairman, said last night.

The exact profit is not yet known because expenses and $1,500 must yet be subtracted from this amount, he said. This amount is an increase over last year's gross intake of $4,500.

Spring Week posters entered in the poster contest will be on display until today, Peter Lockhart, poster contest chairman, said.

Groups may claim their posters tomorrow and Saturday at the Hetzel Union desk, he said.
