ICCB Study Analyzed

By AL BUTKUS

Student opinion voiced through the Inter-College Council Board's four-term evaluation questionnaire indicates no strong preference for either the term or semester systems, Warren Long, chairman of the four-term evaluation committee, said yesterday.

A total of 933 questionnaires returned out of 1,641 sent out indicated that a sample of the student body had no preference for either system on the question relating to overall outlook of academic and social effects on college life, Long said.

When this question was broken down by classes, freshmen tended to favor the term system, whereas graduate students favored the semester system, he said.

THE SURVEY showed that the students felt neither system is superior for scholastic achievement, and that they had adequate time under either system for preparation of daily assignments, Long said.

The survey did show that 59 per cent of the students favored the 50-minute period, he added.

Answers to two of the key questions on the questionnaire, Long said, showed that 60 per cent of the students that participated felt that they could comprehend course material better under the semester, but 70 per cent of the students felt they had better study habits under the term system.

THE RESULTS of the survey showed that if comprehensive finals are given, an additional examination period should be added to the term, Long said.

The results of the survey also showed that 77 per cent of students thought that more than half of the professors adequately adapted the course material to make the term system a success.

"Although our survey shows no preference for either system, the student body in general indicated that the term system has had adverse effects, as shown by certain questions," Long said.

COMPARING the two systems, approximately 80 per cent of the students felt that social and extra-curricular activities are adversely affected by the term system, Long added.

The survey also indicated that better than 85 per cent of the students felt the term system hinders the preparation of term papers and lab reports in comparison with the semester system, Long said.

In addition, the survey showed that 78 per cent of the students participating want a Thursday through Sunday Thanksgiving vacation and 78 per cent want a Friday through Sunday Easter vacation, Long said.

Faulkner Defines Quest for Truth By University, Religious Institutions

By ELLEN BRADLEY

The university is a quest for truth just as religion is a quest for truth, Joseph E. Faulkner, instructor in sociology, said last night.

Faulkner's talk, "The Religious Milieu of the College Student," was sponsored by the Liberal Arts Lecture Series.

Faulkner explained, however, that there is actually a dissimilarity between the two because of the means employed by the two institutions in their quest for truth.

"The university is characterized by the fact that it holds nothing too sacred to be investigated," he said.

HOWEVER, the religious institution follows the principle that "acceptance of truth is revealed to man by or from God." It is not a blind faith, he explained, but a historical faith.

"Therefore," Faulkner said, "we here at the University objectively study religion."

The "scientific method" of study as practiced by the University requires that the student be subjected to the meaning of religious values, he said.

The study of religion in the social sciences, for example, does not advocate embracing the religious values, but rather, teaching the student to be aware of the importance of these values in society.

IN THE AREAS of health, family, government and education, man acts in terms of his religious values, he said. These motivate many people, he said, and are a part of the social experience of most people in our society.

"Therefore, the student is urged to embrace the scientific values. To by-pass introducing a student to these values would be less than scientific."

Faulkner, a graduate of the Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., has a bachelor of divinity and is working here for his doctorate.

Tribunal Applications

Applications are now available at the HUB desk for the off-campus Tribunal. Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors who will be living downtown this fall and have a 2.25 all-University average are eligible. Applications must be turned in at the HUB desk by 4 p.m. Monday, Roger A. Schwarz, tribunal chairman, said.

Panhel Vetoes Plans For Concert Change

The Panhellenic Council voted last night not to support holding the IFC-Panhel Jazz Festival during Spring Week.

The council, however, voted to support a jazz festival or music festival featuring a popular artist at some other date. The motion stipulated that such a festival be held without requiring the sororities to buy tickets for all their members whether or not they attended.

A motion that Panhel withdraw its support from any music festival because of the loss of money due to the elimination of compulsory tickets was defeated.

Robert Polishook, Homecoming Weekend chairman, spoke to the council concerning the proposal to hold a float parade on Friday evening of Homecoming Weekend, Oct. 19.

POLISHOOK ASKED the delegates to discuss the proposal with their sororities and report their opinions at the next Panhel meeting. He said they should discuss the proposal in view of the probability that the Greek Week Sing will be held the following week.

There would be three categories, all pertaining to a theme about alumni, in the float parade Polishook said. The nine winning floats would be exhibited before the football game with Syracuse on Saturday, he added. The floats could also be used for the fraternity lawn displays, he said.

Polishook said that he would like to have 30 groups participate in the float parade. He explained that it had not yet been decided if the groups would work with Spring Week partners or if winners would get points toward Spring Week awards.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the council discussed suggestions for the 1962 Greek Week Sing and decided to take the suggestions back to the sororities for discussion. The proposals will be voted on at the next meeting.

Discussion centered around the question of holding a competitive sing during the week of Oct. 21 if a Homecoming float parade were held on Oct. 19.

Jean Kennedy, second vice president and Greek Week co-chairman, said that the sing finals might be televised. She suggested that there be three instead of four groups as finalists, and that the finalists sing a song of their own choosing in addition to the compulsory song and a fraternity song.

4 Hurt in Accident During Heavy Rain

A sophomore was among four persons injured in a 2-car accident during a heavy rainstorm at 5:15 p.m. yesterday on Route 545, state police said last night.

Phillip O'Boyle, in business administration from Bellefonte, was admitted to Centre County Hospital with a possible skull fracture and puncture wound of the head, police said. A passenger in his car, Carol Longwell, of Clarence, received cuts of the face and a possible back injury.

The operator of the other vehicle, Andrew Bugosh, also of Clarence, was admitted to the hospital with a possible fractured skull, a cut lip and abrasions of the chest and elbows. Police said his wife, Mary, who was in the car with him, received a possible fractured skull and multiple lacerations of the face and leg.

The accident occurred when O'Boyle's car, traveling north on Route 545 toward Bellefonte, skidded across the slippery highway into the on-coming Bugosh vehicle, police said.
