

Study Abroad Outlined

By ELLEN BRADLEY

European political institutions and European integration are included in one of the courses being studied by University students at both the University of Strasbourg in France and the University of Cologne in West Germany.

THE HISTORY and appreciation of medieval Architecture as well as various French courses are being studied by the 41 students in France under the direction of Margaret B. Matson, associate professor of sociology.

The 25 students in Germany who are being accompanied by Dagobert de Levie, director of Study Abroad, are taking a course entitled the history and appreciation of the theatre. In addition, they are studying the German short story and various levels of the German language.

The students have been studying under the Liberal Arts Study Abroad since the beginning of the spring term.

Negotiations to include a university in Spain in the Study Abroad program for the spring term 1963 have begun, Richard C. Maloney, associate dean of the College of the Liberal Arts, said recently.

De Levie will visit Spain in June following his return from Germany, Maloney said.

The University has been in consultation with the Spanish embassy in Washington, and the embassy officials seem to favor the plan, Maloney said.

Maloney also said that an evaluation of this year's Study Abroad program will take place when the students return from France and Germany.

The evaluation will enable the liberal arts committee on Study Abroad to determine needed revisions in the program, Maloney said. The committee will also determine the number of students who will be able to study abroad next year.

CYRIL F. HAGER, assistant dean for continuing education, will accompany the students studying in Germany next year, and Eileen de Peiffer, instructor in Romance languages, will accompany the students studying in Spain, if negotiations in Spain are successful, Maloney said.

The person who will conduct the affairs of the students studying in France has not been announced, he added.

ROTC Officers, Cadets Prepare For Military Camps, Navy Cruises

By AL KREBS

Officers and cadets of the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC programs are now making final preparations for their respective summer camp programs.

One hundred and seventeen cadets of junior or senior standing in Army ROTC will attend a general military science camp at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation at Annaville, Col. William Geelan, assistant professor of military science, said.

COL. ELLIS B. RICHIE, professor of military science, will be camp commander of the six-week encampment. This camp of 2,100 cadets will be the largest ROTC encampment in the history of the Army.

Army Cadets will be trained in tactical field problems, map reading, artillery and other phases of practical application of military science Col Geelan said.

Commander Robert J. Clancey, associate professor of naval science, said 154 Naval ROTC midshipmen will take part in six-week summer cruises. Freshmen will sail on a third class cruise for six weeks along the eastern coast of the United States.

THE SOPHOMORE or second class cruise will consist of two and one half weeks of aviation training in Corpus Christi, Texas, and two-and-one-half weeks of amphibious training in Norfolk, Va.

Some juniors will train as junior officers on submarine hunter killers with the 6th Fleet on the Mediterranean, and others with the 2nd Fleet in the Atlantic.

Forty-three air science cadets will take part in the Air Force summer camp program, according to John D. Little, assistant professor of air science.

THE PURPOSE of this summer camp is to prepare the advanced cadets for commissioned service. This summer they will get experience in practical application of military discipline and training, Little said.

These cadets will be trained in survival, the functions of an Air Force base, air craft and air crew orientation and physical fitness.

School of Journalism Plans to Host 3 Visiting Profs Next Academic Year

The School of Journalism plans to host three distinguished visiting professors during the next academic year.

Howard Gossage, president of Weiner and Gossage advertising agency of San Francisco, Calif., will come to the University for the fall term.

Gossage will be accompanied by his wife, Sally Kemp Gossage, who played the lead female role in the Broadway production of "Advise and Consent."

During the winter term, Henry Ladd Smith, former director of the school of communications of the University of Washington, will teach at the University.

Smith is co-author of the textbook, Press and America, currently being used at this University.

Tentative program plans for the spring term include Mark Ethridge, chairman of the board of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times.

Bowhill Resigns Position

Sidney A. Bowhill has resigned as associate professor of electrical engineering, effective Aug. 31, to accept a position as a professor at the Graduate Research Center of the Southwest Institute for Advanced Study in Dallas.

He joined the University faculty in 1955.

Boal Barn, Mateer Offer Area Theater

By DONNAN BEESON

Theatre groups in the State College area will be active this summer with two playhouses operating with heavy schedules.

Mateer Playhouse, owned and operated by the University, will open its season June 19 with Florence Lowe and Caroline Francke's comedy, "The 49th Cousin." Equity actors from New York City will supply all the "dramatis personae" for the summer. The director will be Max Fischer a member of the staff of the American Theatre Wing.

OTHER PLAYS scheduled at Mateer are Tennessee Williams' "Period of Adjustment," June 26-Aug. 7; "Tiger at the Gates" by Christopher Fry, July 10-14; James Thurber's "Thurber Carnival," July 17-28 and "All the King's Men" by Robert Penn Warren, July 31-Aug. 4.

"Send Me No Flowers" by Norman Barasch and Carroll Moore will have a two-week run from Aug. 7 to 18. The season will culminate with James and William Goldman's "Blood, Sweat and Stanley Pole" Aug. 21-25.

The playhouse is located 18 miles south of State College near Stone Valley. Tickets may be purchased through the theatre arts department.

THE STATE College Community Theatre sponsors the other summer playhouse in this area, the Boal Barn Playhouse, located in Boalsburg.

Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" will begin the season on June 13 and run until June 23. Leslie Steven's "The Marriage-Go-Round" will open June 27 and run until July 7.

Other plays on the bill are "Twelve Angry Men" by Reginald Rose, July 11-23; Terrence Rattigan's "Separate Tables," opening July 25 and closing Aug. 4; and "The Tender Trap" by Max Shulman and Robert Paul Smith, Aug. 8-18.

WARREN BURNS, graduate student in theatre arts from Allentown, and James Dewsnap, graduate student in theatre arts from State College, will be directors for the summer.

Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. C. L. Wilson at AD 7-7876.

Women Gain 'Honor Dorm', Head of IAWS

The establishment of Delaware House of Runkle Hall as an "honor dorm" and the election of Catherine Hersey as national president of the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students highlighted AWS events this year.

DELAWARE House, a group of approximately 75 women, was opened fall term as an experimental residence. Residents were allowed to make and enforce their own rules within the limits of AWS judicial regulations. No member of the professional staff of the dean of women lives in the dorm.

The coeds set up an original sign-out system, allowed men in study lounges on weekends and set up a "third person responsibility system." Under this plan, residents of the house take turns in performing duties ordinarily taken care of by a member of the professional staff.

CATHERINE HERSEY, chairman of the IAWS convention held in March, was elected national president of IAWS at the meeting.

These changes in the AWS judicial code will go into effect in fall as a result of a student opinion survey and AWS action: informal dress for Saturday evening meals, a penalty of ten late minutes for failure to sign in and two 1 a.m. permissions at the beginning of each term.

Collegian to Continue Publishing On Weekly Basis for Summer

Two of the principal student publications will continue to function during the summer term.

The Daily Collegian will be published 10 times during the term and will come out on Thursday of each week.

The Board of Editors plan to hold a candidate school and interested students should contact the Collegian office.

Kay Mills, junior in political science from Chevy Chase, Md., has been named editor of The Summer Collegian and Joan Mehan, junior in elementary and kindergarten education from Donora, will be associate editor. Herbert Witmer, sophomore in business administration from Lampeter, will be business manager.

There will be positions on the Collegian for students as reporters, photographers and members of the business staff.

La Vie, the University yearbook, will continue working throughout the summer term.

Students interested in working as typists and copyreaders should contact the La Vie office in Engineering D.

Sterling Named Officer Of Patent Appeals Court

Thomas E. Sterling, legal assistant to President Eric A. Walker, was admitted to practice before the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals recently.

He took the admission oath to become an officer of this tribunal before the full court in Washington, D.C., on the motion of Mr. Raymond I. Tompkins of the Department of the Navy.

Before becoming associated with the University, he engaged in a private law practice in Niagara Falls, N.Y.
