Weather Averages Close to Normal

By JOEL MYERS

Except for a few outstanding weather events, temperature, humidity, rainfall and other measurements of the atmosphere's behavior indicate the weather was surprisingly normal during the past three terms.

A MIGHTY SNOWSTORM, the second heaviest in local weather history, paralyzed the campus with a whopping 21 inches of snow on March 6.

A blazing heat wave brought record high temperatures to the campus during mid-May. The all-time high temperature for May was tied during the height of the heat spell, which lasted seven days.

The heat wave more than neutralized the effect of the well-below normal temperatures that prevailed in early May, and the month went on the books as the third warmest in the 78 years of records.

It was also the fifth driest May on record. Precipitation totaled a scant 1.37 inches, which is about one-third the normal amount.

April was an unusual month. Its average temperature was exactly normal, but temperatures averaged near record lows in early April and near record high temperatures through the latter half of the month.

The total snowfall for the 1961-62 winter was well below the record-setting 92 inches that fell the previous year, but nearly 15 inches above the 44-inch normal amount. Most of the snow fell in the second half of the winter.

Last fall averaged slightly warmer than normal, the winter was somewhat colder than usual, and the spring has averaged warmer than normal.

How the summer will be is anybody's guess.

MORE SUMMER STUDENTS!

They're coming in all sorts of transportation. There's a rumor two arrived on horse-back. Well you can never tell what a student will arrive in, but it's a safe bet what one of his stops will be once at Penn State. The word's already out. Make Campus Cleaners your cleaning headquarters this summer.

It's not surprising. For years Campus Cleaners has been the home of many a Penn Stater's clothing. Students know that at Campus Cleaners they always get quick, professional service. (If you're really in a rush, bring it in by 3 p.m. and it will be ready the same day!) We don't want those of you who are new to blindly run off following the herd. But drop off a few of your summer things at one-ten east beaver avenue, and find out for yourself. Your clothing will be glad you did. Campus Cleaners, one-ten east beaver ave. Next to the post office.
