Kennedy Approves 'Interdependence'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — President Kennedy chose historic Independence Hall yesterday to call for an international declaration of interdependence — a partnership with a united Europe.

"This will not be completed in a year," the President conceded, "but let the world know that this is now our goal."

Kennedy had the nation's governors among his audience—42 of them motored in this morning from Hershey, where they held their 54th annual conference.

A crowd estimated by police at more than 100,000, plus a nationwide television and radio audience, heard Kennedy compare the efforts to unify Western Europe with the coming together of the 13 original Colonies.

"THE UNITED STATES looks on this vast new European enterprise with hope and admiration," Kennedy said. "We do not regard a strong and united Europe as a rival but as a partner."

If the partnership can be effected, Kennedy said, "We can assist the developing nations to throw off the yoke of poverty. We can balance our worldwide trade and payments at the highest level of growth." He said, "We can mount a deterrent powerful enough to prevent all aggression. And ultimately we can help to achieve a world of law and free choice banishing the world of war and coercion."

Kennedy began his speech by saying that last week he dropped by the National Archives in Washington to look at the original Declaration of Independence.

"For 186 years," he said, "this doctrine of national interdependence has shaken the globe—and it remains the most powerful force anywhere in the world today."

"If there is a single issue that divides the world today," he went on, "it is independence—the independence of Berlin or Laos or Viet Nam—the longing for independence behind the Iron Curtain—the peaceful transition of independence in those newly emerging areas whose troubles some hope to exploit."

"BECAUSE our system is designed to preserve the rights of the individual and the locality against pre-eminent central authority—you and I, governors, both recognize how dependent we both are, one upon the other, for the successful operation of our unique and happy form of government," the President said.

"Our task—your task in the statehouse and my task in the White House—is to weave from all these tangled threads of fabric of law and progress."

But Kennedy, in his call for cooperation with Western Europe, was looking far into the future.

"It would be premature, at this time, to do more than indicate the high regard with which we would view the formation of this partnership," Kennedy said.

"THE FIRST ORDER of business is for our European friends to go forward in forming the more perfect union which will someday soon make it possible."

"A great new edifice is not built overnight. Building the Atlantic partnership will not be cheaply or easily finished."

Senate Adopts Rule On Student Rights

By DOROTHY DRASHER

The University Senate unanimously adopted a uniform code of judicial policy Tuesday which specifically states the rights of students in disciplinary actions.

The policy had been stated previously but now becomes an official part of the Senate regulations for undergraduates as rule W-16.

The Senate also decided to delay discussion on the Liberal Arts Planning Committee resolution concerning voluntary ROTC instruction until its October meeting.

The Senate judicial policy outlines the general procedure to be followed in disciplinary cases. Laurence H. Lattman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Student Affairs, said.

THE COMMITTEE decided against enumerating the specific procedures to be followed because the policy must remain flexible, Lattman said.

For example, Lattman said, the policy states that the student must be informed of the charges against him "sufficiently in advance" instead of specifically three or four days in advance of the date the student's case will be heard.

The policy also states the student "shall have the right to call a reasonable number of witnesses in his or her behalf" and "shall have the right to cross examine any or all of his accusers who can reasonably be expected to attend the hearing."

Other parts of the rule including provisions on the right of appeal and student tribunal disciplinary recommendations will be printed in full in the 1962-63 copy of the Senate regulations. All undergraduates will receive a copy of these rules at fall registration.

DEBATE ON making the ROTC program voluntary for liberal arts students was tabled due to a request that the report from the Senate Committee on Military Instruction be deleted from the agenda.

The October meeting was termed "a better time to take up a matter of such importance." The Liberal Arts Planning Committee will by then have had the opportunity to circulate copies of the entire report which "shows cause" for the voluntary ROTC plan, R. Wallace Brewster, chairman of the committee, said following the Senate meeting.

In January the Senate had delayed action on this matter until the committee could "show cause" for any discussion or action on the plan, he said. The committee then prepared the report, which Brewster said will be circulated before the October meeting.

A 7th term student in business administration has been suspended from the University until the end of the winter term, 1963, by the Senate Subcommittee on Discipline, Daniel R. Leasure, assistant dean of men, said Tuesday.

THE STUDENT had falsified an application to take a civil service examination for a position with the state highway department, Leasure said.

Even though the student is not taking courses here this summer, he is still subject to University rules and regulation and can be disciplined by the subcommittee for misconduct, Leasure said.

All students enrolled at the University—whether on vacation, home for the weekend or visiting another University—are subject to these regulations, Leasure said.

The falsified application was discovered when a letter was sent to David H. McKinley, associate dean of the College of Business Administration, from a person in the state's Department of Civil Engineering, which is connected with the highway department.

THE STUDENT, enrolled in business administration, had stated on the application he was a civil engineering major when he found out this was a necessary qualification for the summer job.
