Packers Choice in West

By The Associated Press

We're not going to go silly on you and say the Packers have the Western Division title salted away before the season even begins, but—

Somebody is going to have to throw a lot of tall football at 'em to beat 'em.

This is a collection of big, rough, determined, skillful men and they're coached by a guy who for pure devotion to advancing makes Napoleon Bonaparte look like a refugee from the Internal Revenue Department.

The improved San Francisco 49'ers should finish second to Green Bay in the West. Detroit is our pick for third, Baltimore is tabbed to wind up fourth, the Chicago Bears are likely to finish fifth, Los Angeles is picked for sixth place and Minnesota to occupy the cellar.

We'll try to back up those picks with facts and figures. Vince Lombardi, the grim coach of the Packers, will go to the post with just about the same team that reduced the New York Giants to midgets, 37 to 0, in the title game last fall.

Bart Starr, capable and steady, will go at quarterback with John Roach in reserve. If there is a weakness on Green Bay there it is. An injury to Starr would put pressure on Roach that he might not be able to handle.

Paul Hornung is back at the running halfback post, from where he runs, blocks, passes, catches passes and in general intimidates the opposition. Jim Taylor is the fullback. He runs as though he's leading a stampede. In reserve are Tom Moore, a flash, and Earl Gros, a rookie version of Taylor.

Boyd Dowler, Max McGee and Ron Kramer will do the pass catching. The line, on both offense and defense, is tremendous.

The 49'ers have flashing speed, what may be a really fine quarterback in John Brodie, and a reconstructed defense with two new linebackers. They will be the explosive team in the West.

DETROIT IS the sturdiest defensive club in the West, with the possible exception of Green Bay. The Lions give ground a yard at a time. But their running game on offense is uncertain. And Milt Plum, the new thinking man's quarterback, has yet to prove that he can win the big ones. Plum is the key for Detroit.

The Colts still will have Johnny Unitas to throw those bullet passes and they have some guys who can catch them, notably Ray Berry and Jimmy Orr. If their morale wasn't shaken too much by Lenny Moore's injury, they could make trouble in the West.

The Chicago Bears had a bad series of pre-season games and they just have to be better than they looked. Bill Wade at quarterback will have to turn in a big season for the Bears to make a run for the money.

Their offensive and defensive lines are good and they have a fine trio of linebackers. Injuries hurt in the exhibition games and perhaps the Bears will be more fortunate in the regular season.

The Los Angeles Rams, as usual, have excellent runners, speedy receivers and hulking linemen. Maybe this is the year they'll tie all that talent together.

There is some question as to whether Zeke Bratkowski is a title quarterback and some observers think that if the Rams are to win they will need some help from rookie Roman Gabriel. We'll see.

The Minnesota Vikings can be counted on for a big try every Sunday. Coach Norm Van Brocklin will see to that. The Vikings have a hot young quarterback in Fran Tarkenton. But they lack the depth and finesse to make a serious title bid.

Nittany Lion Owes Existence To Two Tigers

During the next few weeks all you frosh will be practicing your own versions of "How to Win Friends and Influence People" and one of the best ways to start is by learning some basic facts about this institution.

In the first place, football, in case you haven't already heard, is quite important to our way of life. And the symbol of that team, as with all other State athletic squads, is the Nittany Lion.

The Lion came into being shortly after the turn of the century when members of the State baseball team remarked how impressed they were by the statues of tigers that adorned the Princeton campus.

The next problem for these nimble minds was what to choose for our symbol. It was decided to adopt the mountain lion that once roamed the hills of Central Pennsylvania.

As the campus is situated at the foot of Mt. Nittany, the Nittany Lion came into being.
