

Congress to Hear Bill On Spring Week Control

A bill proposing a meeting of representatives from groups who participated in last year's Spring Week will be presented to the Undergraduate Student Government Congress Wednesday, Fred Good (fraternity) said last night.

Good said he would present the proposal in accordance with a recommendation from the Interfraternity Council Encampment held Tuesday.

Under his proposal, the meeting would be held Thursday in the Hetzel Union building. The recommendations from that meeting would then be presented to Congress, Good said.

The object of the bill is to allow people who participate in Spring Week to have a voice in determining policies concerning the event, Good said.

Another recommendation of the IFC Encampment concerned fraternity scholarship policies. This proposal will be presented to IFC Monday night.

Under this recommendation, the probation requirement for a fraternity will be either a 2.35 house average or 25 per cent of the members receiving below a 2.00 term average.

The present scholarship policy states that a fraternity term average must be above the independent men's term average.

This recommendation also includes specific penalties to be imposed upon a fraternity that fails to meet the scholarship requirement. Under the present policy the IFC scholarship committee can only recommend penalties.

Also at the encampment, Philip Cozad (Chi-Phi) was appointed rushing chairman for 1962-63.

In the rushing workshop, it was recommended that the fraternity orientation program be continued. This program consisting of slides and a talk was presented during summer counseling for the first time to freshmen and their parents.

Following the program parents were asked to fill out a questionnaire concerning fraternities and fraternity life.

Marin to Lecture in Moscow

Joseph Marin, head of the Department of Engineering Mechanics, has been invited to give a series of lectures at the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union in Moscow during the first three weeks in October.

The lectures will concern the mechanics of creep and plastics of materials.

As a guest of the Soviet Union, Marin will also visit educational institutions and laboratories during his stay in Russia. His Russian visit is part of a six-month leave which begins Oct. 1.

MARIN HAS also been invited to present a series of lectures on mechanics at educational institutions in Israel, India and Japan, following his stay in the Soviet Union. He plans to lecture at the Israel Institute of Technology at Haifa, the Indian Institute of Science at Bangalore and the University of Osaka in Japan.

The professor has included several other countries in Europe and Asia in his itinerary.

Marin will devote the remainder of his leave to research in material science as it relates to solid state mechanics. His research is sponsored by the National Science Foundation, U.S. Army Research Office and the Allegheny Ballistics Laboratory of the Hercules Powder Company.

A member of the University faculty since 1942, Marin became head of the Department of Engineering Mechanics in 1952. Before coming to Penn State, he taught at the University of Illinois, Rutgers University and the Illinois Institute of Technology.

In 1949 Marin was the winner of the George Westinghouse Award of the American Society for Engineering Education. He has conducted about 50 sponsored research projects and is the author of about 150 technical papers and six books on materials and stress analysis.

MARIN received his bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees from the University of British Columbia. He earned his master's degree at the University of Illinois and his doctor of philosophy degree at the University of Michigan.

ANOTHER YEAR, ANOTHER DOLLAR

With today's entry I begin my ninth year of writing columns in your school newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes.

Nine years, I believe you will agree, is a long time. In fact, it took only a little longer than nine years to dig the Suez Canal, and you know what a gigantic undertaking that was! To be sure, the work would have gone more rapidly had the shovel been invented at that time, but, as we all know, the shovel was not invented until 1946 by Walter R. Shovel of Cleveland, Ohio. Before Mr. Shovel's discovery in 1946, all digging was done with sugar tongs—a method unquestionably dainty but hardly what one would call rapid. There were, naturally, many efforts made to speed up digging before Mr. Shovel's breakthrough—notably an attempt in 1912 by the immortal Thomas Alva Edison to dig with the phonograph, but the only thing that happened was that he got his horn full of sand. This so depressed Mr. Edison that he fell into a fit of melancholy from which he did not emerge until two years later when his friend William Wordsworth, the eminent nature poet, cheered him up by imitating a duck for four and a half hours.

But I digress. For nine years, I say, I have been writing this column for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, and for nine years they have been paying me money. You are shocked. You think that anyone who has tasted Marlboro's unparalleled flavor, who has enjoyed Marlboro's filter, who has revelled in Marlboro's jolly red and white pack or box should be more than willing to write about Marlboro without a penny's compensation. You are wrong.

Compensation is the very foundation stone of the American Way of Life. Whether you love your work or hate it, our system absolutely requires that you be paid for it. For example, I have a friend named Rex Clebe, a veterinarian by profession, who simply adores to worm dogs. I mean you can call him up and say, "Hey, Rex, let's go bowl a few lines," or "Hey, Rex, let's go flatten some pennies on the railroad tracks," and he will always reply, "No, thanks. I better stay here in case somebody wants a dog wormed." I mean there is not one thing in the whole world you can name that Rex likes better than worming a dog. But even so, Rex always sends a bill for worming your dog because in his wisdom he knows that to do otherwise would be to rend, possibly irreparably, the fabric of democracy.

"I better stay in case somebody wants a dog wormed."

It's the same with me and Marlboro Cigarettes. I think Marlboro's flavor represents the pinnacle of the tobaccoist's art. I think Marlboro's filter represents the pinnacle of the filter-maker's art. I think Marlboro's pack and box represent the pinnacle of the packager's art. I think Marlboro is a pleasure and a treasure, and I fairly burst with pride that I have been chosen to speak for Marlboro on your campus. All the same, I want my money every week. And the makers of Marlboro understand this full well. They don't like it, but they understand it.

In the columns which follow this opening installment, I will turn the hot white light of truth on the pressing problems of campus life—the many and varied dilemmas which beset the undergraduate—burning questions like "Should Chaucer classrooms be converted to parking garages?" and "Should proctors be given a saliva test?" and "Should foreign exchange students be held for ransom?"

And in these columns, while grappling with the crises that vex campus America, I will make occasional brief mention of Marlboro Cigarettes. If I do not, the makers will not give me any money.

The makers of Marlboro will bring you this uncensored, free-style column 25 times throughout the school year. During this period it is not unlikely that Old Max will step on some toes—principally ours—but we think it's all in fun and we hope you will too.
