

Palmer Describes Rough Round With Comedian and Chimpanzee

LONDON (AP) — Arnold Palmer wound up what he described as the toughest round of his golf career yesterday.

"It was certainly over the most hazardous course I've ever played," said Palmer, "and with some of the oldest players—Bob Hope and a chimpanzee named Charlie."

Palmer flew here from the United States last week to appear in Hope's new movie. In the film, Palmer plays the role of a golf pro on a course in Africa.

While the cameras whirl, he's been playing chip shots off the backs of elephants and instructing Hope on how to play around a hippopotamus.

THESE WERENT the only distractions.

At one point—when he was trying to drop a 30-foot putt—a herd of zebras stampeded behind him.

"And then there were those hyenas," said Palmer, "I don't know where they got them, but they kept laughing while I was shooting."

The picture is being made at the nearby Pinewood Studios. The golf sequence lasts 8 minutes but it's taken a week to film.

In between the swinging, Palmer has had to learn and speak several lines.

One exchange with Hope went this way:

Hope, after getting off a good shot—"Ever see a man swing like that before?"

"JUST ONCE. He was swinging from a tree," replies Palmer.

During his filming, Palmer bet Hope that he could teach Charlie, the chimp, how to beat Hope as a putter.

"I gave Charlie an hour's instruction," laughed Palmer, "and felt this was enough. But I was wrong. Charlie failed to drop a single putt, but he shows great promise which is more than I can say for Bob."

Hope, of course, is an excellent golfer—off the movie set.

*Assignment: build a brake
that will make its own adjustments*

It's now a fact: every Ford-built car in '63 has self-adjusting brakes

"Give us a brake," Ford Motor Company engineers were told, "that will automatically compensate for lining wear whenever an adjustment is needed—and make it work for the entire life of the lining."

Tough assignment—but not insurmountable. Today, not only does every Ford-built car boast self-adjusting brakes, but the design is so excellent that adjustments can be made more precisely than by hand.

This Ford-pioneered concept is not complex. Key to it is a simple mechanism which automatically maintains proper clearance between brake drum and lining.

Self-adjustment takes place when the brakes are applied while backing up. This adjustment normally occurs but once in several hundred miles of driving. The brake pedal stays up, providing full pedal reserve for braking.

Another assignment completed—and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.
