

University to Award Contracts For Four New Residence Halls

The University will award contracts this week for the construction of four new residence halls in the Pollock and East Halls areas. Work on the new units is scheduled to begin immediately after the contracts are awarded.

Stanley H. Campbell, vice president for business, said that the four units, which will house approximately 1,000 students, are scheduled for completion by the fall of 1964.

Two of the new units will be located in the East Halls area, directly east of the dining hall. The other two will be built south of the Pollock Halls dining area.

Campbell said that the construction costs, which will be slightly under $5 million, will be paid with income from student fees. This is the plan now used for the financing of all campus residence halls, he said.

Hey there, you with the raft of ideas! ME, EE, AE ENGINEERS

Get that raft afloat fast, and head for the land where ideas multiply. But before you set your course, you'll want to compare the opportunities . . . the challenge . . . offered by potential employers with what you can bring to your employer.

What's up at Hamilton Standard? In brief, a diversification program that includes design and development of propulsion controls, life support systems, other environmental control systems, electron beam machines, automatic stabilization systems, propellers, and ground support equipment.

We're looking for men with ideas . . . ideas ready to be launched. If you're an engineering student looking for the best means to an end, pick up a Hamilton Standard brochure at your placement office. It may hold the first clue to how you can get started toward the best company for you.

A Hamilton Standard college personnel representative will be on campus soon. He'll be glad to answer your questions, and to take your application for a position if you decide you like what you've learned about us.
