

Lions in Top Condition For West Virginia Game

By JOHN MORRIS
Sports Editor

The Penn State football team, hampered much of the season by injuries to key performers, will probably be in top physical shape for this Saturday's Beaver Stadium clash with West Virginia.

The Nittanies escaped the Maryland game with no serious injuries and, even more heartening to State fans, most of the Lions' injured members are rounding back into shape.

Right halfback Al Gursky is almost fully recovered from the knee and rib injuries which have hindered him most of the campaign.

The hard-running senior is a big man in the Lion attack as a runner and a pass receiver. He just missed tying a Penn State record for pass receptions when he grabbed eight aeri-als in the Nittanies' 23-21 victory over California two weeks ago. Len Krouse set the record with nine catches against Syracuse in 1940.

QUARTERBACK Don Caum is apparently ready to go full speed again after shoulder and knee miseries had limited his effectiveness for most of the fall. Caum intercepted two of Dick Shiner's aeri-als Saturday, returning one 39 yards to set up the game-clinching touchdown. He grabbed his second interception shortly after the first one to give State an insurance score in the fourth quarter.

Tackle Chuck Sieminski, end Dave Robinson and halfback Roger Kochman — State's three most oft-mentioned candidates for All-American honors—are recovering from minor injuries that have slowed them in the Lions' last several outings.

Robinson, named to this week's ECAC All-East team for his performance against Maryland, has been bothered by a bruised ankle. He will be ready for West Virginia.

Sieminski bruised his shoulder two weeks ago, but the injury is responding to treatment. Kochman has been bothered all season by a variety of leg and foot injuries but emerged unscathed from the Maryland game.

Center Joe Galardi and guard Bob Hart are both progressing nicely after knee injuries and end Dick Anderson is healthy again after being hindered in recent games by shoulder and ankle injuries.

First unit quarterback Pete Liske suffered a cut over his left eye in the Maryland game, but will be ready to lead a healthy brood of Lions against the Mounties.

Marin Well Schooled In Cage Fundamentals

By JIM BUKATA

(This is the fourth in a series on members of the 1962-63 Penn State basketball team. Next is Bob Weiss.)

Chuck Marin is a member of a basketball playing family in which he has always performed in the shadow of his brother Jack.

Ever since he was a senior at Farrell High School, and the seventh man on the 1960 state championship team, Marin has had to listen to the hometown people say how great his younger brother would be.

Jack Marin was an all-state performer last year and is now a member of the Duke University freshman squad.

This could be the best break Chuck has ever had. With his brother 1,000 miles away, the shadow may finally lift.

Even though he rarely played in high school, Marin came to State drilled by one of the best prep coaches in the state, Ed McClusky of Farrell.

Marin's only drawback at 6-5, 170 pounds, is his lack of bulk. He is not physically equipped to fight with the bigger men under the boards.

ANOTHER OF Marin's big problems lies with the books. In both his freshman and sophomore years, he was only able to participate half a season due to scholastic ineligibility.

However, in the games he played, Marin showed the Lion fans a better than average shot. His soft one-handed jump shot from outside the key accounted for more than just a few points.

Coach John Egli feels that Marin's shooting is above average, but adds that he needs to improve on defense and dribbling.

Egli felt that there were two problems confronting him with Marin this year—where to play him and how to keep him eligible.

"I can work with him at a guard position or a forward because he has the ability to play both," Egli said, "but the main thing for Marin to do is keep eligible. If he doesn't make the grades, then I won't be able to use him anywhere."

Marin has looked good at practice and has Egli confronted with the happy problem of trying to find a spot for him. He could be the surprise of the State team.

Grimsley Picks

Wisconsin To Top Northwestern; Navy, Duke, Notre Dame To Win

By WILL GRIMSLEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The Big Ten is the "upsettiest" conference in the country this year, the No. 1 position is never a comfortable one and there is traditionally an advantage to the home field.

This is the set of circumstances which should knock off the nation's football leader, Northwestern, in the headline game this week. Last week's score, which hit on the upsets victories for Mississippi, Notre Dame and Pitt, was 41-12-773.

Another fling: Wisconsin 33, Northwestern 28: Ron Vanderkeller outpitches Tom Myers in a wild game.

Southern-California 18, Stanford 14: Coach John McKay insists his Trojans will not have a letdown.

Alabama 14, Miami, Fla. 0: Lee Roy Jordan and the Tide defense stops Miami's, dangerous George Mira.

TEXAS 19, Baylor 8: Both teams have heavy casualty lists, but Texas should win the spin-splits and arnica game.

Arkansas 17, Rice 6: The Razorbacks have the best offensive record in the Southwest.

Notre Dame 21, Pittsburgh 11: The Fighting Irish have found an inspiration in Daryle Lamonica.

Washington 14, California 8: Good chance for an upset, with the Golden Bears looking better every game.

Navy 25, Syracuse 14: If it's a dry field, Roger Staubach should hit enough targets to do the job.

Duke 20, Maryland 17: The Blue Devils wrap up the Atlantic Coast Conference crown.
