Lions Host W. Va. In Stadium Finale

By JOHN MORRIS

This afternoon's football game in Beaver Stadium may be the dandiest battle ever contested over an ugly hunk of steel known as "Old Ironsides."

West Virginia can win the three-sided piece of metal — symbolic of football supremacy between Penn State, West Virginia and Pitt — with a victory this afternoon. The Mounties have already beaten Pitt, 15-8, and need only a win today to take "Old Ironsides" for the first time since 1953.

This coveted slab of steel presently rests quite comfortably in State's Rec Hall, and the Lions are determined to keep it there. The Nittanies beat both West Virginia and Pitt last year to capture the trophy.

OF COURSE, the stakes are much higher than just "Old Ironsides." Both teams have 6-1 records going into this game and a herd of post-season bowl scouts are expected to be among the some 37,000 hearty fans on hand for the 1:30 kickoff.

They will probably witness an old-fashioned donnybrook, the same type of battle that takes place any time two old rivals like the Lions and Mountaineers get together.

The Mounties haven't beaten the Nittanies since 1955 and State leads in the series between the two teams, 19-7.

But, as Penn State coach Rip Engle put it, "Records don't mean a thing in this game."

As the last game on the Lions' home schedule, this afternoon's contest will mark the final Beaver Stadium appearance for 12 State Seniors.

Halfbacks Roger Kochman and Al Gursky; fullbacks Dave Hayes and Buddy Torris; tackles Chuck Sieminski, Gerry Farkas and Ron Tietjens; end Dave Robinson; guards Joe Blasenstein and Bob Hart; center Joe Galardi and kicking specialist Chuck Raisig will all be playing their last game on home soil.

Kochman, Gursky, Hayes, Sieminski, Robinson, Blasenstein and Galardi will all be in the starting lineup for the Lions.

West Virginia always gets sky-high for this game and this afternoon will be no exception.

"Whoever wins this game will probably finish with a great record," Mountie coach Gene Corum said earlier this week, "and it might as well be us."

IN ADDITION to their spirit the Mountaineers have what State scout Frank Patrick called a "rough, tough ball club."

The Lions are well aware of the Mounties' ferocity. State jumped off to an early 20-0 lead at Morgantown last year, but spent the whole second half fighting off West Virginia drives. The final score was 20-8, but Engle called the Mounties the most improved team the Lions faced in 1961.

"West Virginia had more good running backs than any other team we faced last fall," Engle said recently, "and most of those fellows are back."

Adding to Engle's usual pre-game misery is the presence of Jerry Yost in the Mounties' backfield.

Yost, a virtual unknown until this season, has been a near-sensation for Gene Corum's team.

He leads the Southern Conference in total offense, ranks 14th in the nation in the same

U.S. Checks Soviet Freighter For Cuban Missile Equipment

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. warships began yesterday their at-sea checking of Soviet missiles from Cuba and reported seeing rockets on the decks of outbound ships which cooperated with the examination.

At the United Nations, a Soviet representative was reported to have given U.S. officials a list of 42 missiles and their supporting equipment and to have said all would be cleared off the Communist-ruled island by Monday.

THIS COUNT was close to an earlier one given by Soviet Premier Khrushchev. The 42 figure is believed also to be close, to estimates by U.S. intelligence officials.

The first contact with the Soviet freighter, Alapayevsk, was made yesterday afternoon at 3:45 by a helicopter from the aircraft carrier Wasp. The destroyer Holder came alongside the Soviet cargo ship about dusk.

Word was flashed back to Navy headquarters that no missile components were apparent on the deck of the Soviet vessel.

Asst. Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester gave newsmen an account of the meeting, based on a message from the scene.

THE ALAPAYEVSK looked to be lightly loaded, and on its deck the helicopter crew could see a variety of construction and earth moving gear, as well as perhaps 150 to 200 men.

Among the gear listed in the report were four fuel trucks — two of them apparently missile oxidizers — as well as five other trucks, many drums and miscellaneous small boxes lashed to the deck.

As Sylvester told it, the Alapayevsk acknowledged having aboard rocket-associated materials which it was bringing out in accordance with a U.S.-Soviet agreement.

Cuban officials insist that no Cuban merchant vessels will submit to inspection of any kind, diplomatic sources reported last night.

The diplomatic informants added that Cuban ships were said to have received orders not to stop for inspection no matter what the consequences may be.

THE DIPLOMATIC informants could not say whether the stated Cuban position was aimed at the U.S.-Soviet agreement in principle to have Red Cross officials inspect Cuba-bound ships for arms. However, it appeared to complicate such a plan.

In the negotiations at the U.N. the Soviet Union has agreed to permit representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross to board Cuba-bound Soviet ships or ships under Soviet charter to make arms inspections. But presumably permission to board a Cuban ship would have to come from Havana.

Roll Call Supported by Candidates, Opinion Divided on Town Definition

The three town candidates campaigning for an Undergraduate Student Government Congress seat agreed last night that a roll call vote is beneficial under certain circumstances.

Bert Kapinus, Robert Osman and Richard Trigilio, all members of the Town Independent Men's Council, are running for the congressional seat vacated last week when George Gordon resigned.

The special town election will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. Voting will take place at one poll on the ground floor of the Hetzel Union Building.

Following are excerpts from the candidates' comments on the roll call issue.

KAPINUS: "If the Congressman knows he is going to be held responsible for his votes, then he will make more conscientious decisions."

Osman: "Roll call votes should not be used for every issue, but I like the idea because it makes one think twice before voting."

TRIGILIO: "I'm definitely in favor of the roll call vote. Congressmen should make their decisions by themselves and not the way a party wants them to. A roll call should help stop that practice."

The candidates were also asked if they thought the current definition of "town" area was too broad. Town congressmen represent all students who aren't fraternity members or who don't live on campus.

Kapinus: "If feasible, I would favor separate representatives for commuting students. But everyone in State College should be one group."

OSMAN: "All students who live downtown have similar problems. If the area were divided there might be trouble getting people to run."

Trigilio: "It's just not practical to set aside one representative for each different group — commuting students, married students — as well as the town men."

Bills Mailed for Winter Term; Payment Due by December 15

Payments on students' winter term bills are due Dec. 15, the office of the Bursar announced yesterday.

The bills were mailed yesterday to students' homes or, in the case of students with out-of-the-country addresses, to the students' campus addresses.

The Bursar's office urged students to check at home and in their local post office boxes to see if they have received their bills because of possible mistakes in handling or wrong addresses.

If students have not received their bills by the end of next week, the Bursar's office should be notified of the error.

Failure to pay the fee by Dec. 15 will result in a $25 late payment fee. The late payment fee will also be charged in the case of bad checks.

In order to facilitate payment of fees for those who receive financial assistance, the Office of Student Loans has changed its policy for the winter term.

IN THE PAST, these students had to go to the Office of Student Loans to receive a check for the coming term and then present the check at the Bursar's office. This term the money will be transferred to the students' accounts in the Bursar's office, thus making the payment of fees a one-step process.

The transfer of money will not mean, however, that these students must use their loans or scholarships for payment of fees.

Recipients of loans or scholarships should stop at the Office of Student Loans before Nov. 30 with their fee slips if they want to have their money for the winter term deducted from their bills.

Showers Possible For Game Today

Heavy rain is forecast to diminish in intensity this morning and at most a few light showers are expected this afternoon.

A vigorous storm brought heavy rain to most of the eastern states late yesterday and last night. One to three inches of rain are expected to fall in most of the Commonwealth by noon today.

If this were late December rather than mid-November, the northeastern states would today be digging out from under a fresh one to three foot snowfall.

After the rain ends, skies will continue mostly cloudy and temperatures should remain cool. Today's high will be about 48 degrees.

Mostly cloudy skies and gusty winds will continue tonight and a low of 34 is expected.

Tomorrow will be partly sunny and cool.

USG HOPEFULS: Three members of the Town Independent Men's Council will battle each other Tuesday for a vacant USG town area seat. The candidates are, from left, Bert Kapinus (10th-business administration-Boston, Pa.), Richard Trigilio (8th-secondary education-Erie) and Robert Osman (8th-business administration-Marblehead, Mass.).
