

Brand To Sing at Concert in Schwab

Ballads and ditties will be heard in Schwab tomorrow night when Oscar Brand makes a Folklore Society-sponsored appearance at 8.

The folk monger, famous for his "backroom ballads" and his many published comments on American folk singing, is presenting the concert as part of a project of the Folklore Society to bring well-known folk singers to this campus.

"Brand is very experienced as an entertainer," society president Herbert Frank said. "He draws many of his songs from his war experiences and has authored many songs that appear in his repertoire."

"BRAND TRANSFERS many of his own lyrics to known music," Frank added. "He can also take an original song and sing it in the tradition of its origin." The folk monger's humor, Frank said, is sharp and in very good taste.

"Oscar Brand is an excellent example of the modern folk singer," Folklore Society vice-president Sol Brody commented. "He brings songs alive, changing them to fit his own feelings. This is known as the 'folk process' and Brand is an active agent of the method." The society booked Brand for the concert, Brody said, because they thought his style and humor would appeal to a college audience.

"His spiciness," Brody said, "is very much in the college idiom."

Brand, Canadian-born, has been part of the folk monger scene for quite a few years and has recorded extensively. He has also written a number of books the most recent of which is "The Ballad Mongers," a history of and comment on American folk music.

Model U.N. Set As TV Topic

Robert Lefcourt (graduate-English-New York City), secretary general of the University's first Model United Nations General Assembly, is scheduled to appear on television from 9 to 9:15 a.m. Tuesday over Channel 10, WFBG, Altoona.

The Model U.N., sponsored by the Liberal Arts Student Council, will be held Friday through Sunday.

The secretary-general will be interviewed on the University-produced television program, "Second Chair," concerning the "Organization and Purpose of a Model United Nations."

Students who are not actually participating in the model assembly but who wish to observe the sessions in Schwab on Friday and Sunday may obtain one ticket next Tuesday and Wednesday by presenting matriculation cards at the Hetzel Union desk.
