Hey there, you with the raft of ideas!

ME, EE, AE ENGINEERS

Get that raft afloat fast, and head for the land where ideas multiply. But before you set your course, you'll want to compare the opportunities . . . the challenge . . . offered by potential employers with what you can bring to your employer.

What's up at Hamilton Standard? In brief, a diversification program that includes design and development of propulsion controls, life support systems, other environmental control systems, electron beam machines, automatic stabilization systems, propellers, and ground support equipment.

We're looking for men with ideas . . . ideas ready to be launched. If you're an engineering student looking for the best means to an end, pick up a Hamilton Standard brochure at your placement office. It may hold the first clue to how you can get started toward the best company for you.

A Hamilton Standard college personnel representative will be on campus soon. He'll be glad to answer your questions, and to take your application for a position if you decide you like what you've learned about us.

THE DATE: February 5, 6, 1963.
