

Passage of Education Bill Doubted by Congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy's sweeping aid-to-education bill was launched yesterday on a stormy congressional voyage.

Some Democrats saw little chance the entire measure will pass while a Republican protested that an omnibus approach could kill the whole thing.

BUT SECRETARY of Welfare Anthony J. Celebrezze insisted the program should be viewed as a whole.

He said of the administration's 24-part bill, "Each part depends upon the others. They're all important and you can't segment it. We've been delaying for 15 years and it's critical."

Looming ahead are the same shoals on which the aid program foundered last year—controversy over aid to private schools and the shape of assistance programs for higher education.

Celebrezze told the House Education and Labor Committee the entire administration program is needed "to meet selected and urgent needs of American education."

He refused to choose any priority points in the education bill, even after Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., told him "There is little chance of the entire bill going through."

Celebrezze said it's up to Congress to decide now how to handle the measure. He said the administration had done its job by presenting the proposal in the omnibus form it considers best.

Mize Defers Ruling in Ole Miss Case

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — U.S. Dist. Court Judge Sidney Mize told Dewey Greene Jr. yesterday to exhaust all administrative remedies at the University of Mississippi before looking to the courts for an order for his registration.

The judge announced his decision to defer a final ruling at the end of a one-day hearing on Greene's suit seeking federal court aid in his bid to become the second Negro in the university.

Both Greene and the university's registrar, Robert Ellis, testified.

Ellis said the university rejected Greene because of his inadequate scholastic record.

Judge Mize specifically instructed Greene to appeal the rejection to the University's Committee on Admissions, which could overrule the registrar, if it thinks he is qualified for enrollment.

Ellis, in his testimony, said Greene had a grade average of about D-plus in two quarters at Mississippi Vocational School for Negroes. His high school grades were even lower, Ellis said.

Judge Mize delayed action on the portion of Greene's suit seeking contempt proceedings against Ellis for turning him down.

Ellis said the university turns down as many as 100 applicants a year for the same reason it had rejected Greene.

In addition, he testified, Greene was trying to transfer from a school lacking accreditation, Mississippi Vocational School for Negroes.

Greene, in his testimony, said Ellis had told him his grades were the reason the university had turned him down.
