

Language, Education Houses Called Successful Learning Experiences

The efforts of the French, Spanish and two education houses have been fairly successful this year, Mrs. Hugh M. Davison, assistant dean of women, said recently.

A third group, composed of students interested in public affairs and social service, folded earlier this year because of a lack of leadership, she said.

THE PURPOSE of the language houses, which is to give the students facility in the language, has been more successful in the Spanish house because of the native speaker contact the girls have with foreign students.

The two educational groups were organized to help students interested in some aspect of education learn more about the field, she said.

The girls in all four groups have recently been given a general cultural test, and the language groups were tested on their cultural background and ability in the language. The education groups were also given Teaching Situational Tests to see how they would fare as teachers.

THE RESULTS of these tests will probably be ready next fall, she said.

Mrs. Davison explained that these groups were organized as serious endeavors and not as social groups. The groups have their own suite area in Simmons, however, and have become close from living together, she added.

"Now we are interested in seeing if the group wants to continue next year and to see if other groups would be interested in forming," she said.

"There is room for an additional group or two," she added.

Roto Contest Will Close At 11 Tonight

Today is absolutely the last day the BOCME (Board of Collegian Male Editors) will accept pictures for the annual BOCME-Pittsburgh Press Roto College Queen Candidate Contest.

Members of the BOCME and their compatriots, the BOCMM (Board of Collegian Male Managers), have been frantically scurrying about, searching out the loveliest coeds on campus.

At an executive session in the Collegian office, the BOCME issued a proclamation to all females.

"Let it be known that the loveliest girl on campus is to report with her picture to the Collegian office by 11 p.m. tonight. Failure to do so will mean expulsion from the University."

Once the pictures are in the hands of the BOCME, the nine brave men making the decision will go into a caucus that is expected to last until some time late Monday evening.

At that time the five finalists will be announced.

Tuesday, the BOCME will hold a dinner for the five finalists. The winner will be announced Wednesday.

The BOCME queen will be entered in the Pittsburgh Press Roto Magazine College Queen Contest along with entries from most of the colleges and universities in the Western Pennsylvania district.

The pictures of the area candidates will appear in the March 17 edition of the Roto Magazine, and the winner will be announced later in the spring.

So, bring your pictures, 5x7 or 8x10 inches, to the Collegian office in the basement of Sackett.

Peace Groups' Failures Seen in Negative Action

By ELLEN BRADLEY

Many peace movements have failed in the past because the peace groups do nothing but protest, Daniel Singer, secretary-treasurer of the Council for a Liveable World, said Friday.

"In order to be effective," he told a group interested in Sense, Students for Peace, "lobbyists must put themselves in a position of responsibility. This is where the peace movement has fallen down in the past.

"If the protestant wins, he has nothing to offer. He must support or offer a positive program," Singer said.

A recent example of this is the peace movement's support of a third party candidate in the 1962 Massachusetts senatorial election, he explained. The candidate lost to Democrat Edward Kennedy, the President's brother.

"The candidate never really thought he had a chance," Singer said.

Lobbyists must also have confidence that inside the government people are striving for the same things they are, he said. One way to attain this confidence is to keep well informed, Singer said. Information is readily accessible to everyone who bothers to look for it, he added.

"One way to get us out of this jam is through the Council for a Liveable World, recently changed from the Council for Abolishing War," Singer said.

With backing from the council, he explained, people in Congress can speak on important issues without fear of political reprisal, which they would be unable to meet in the next election.

THE COUNCIL provides financial backing for those Congressmen who support responsible, politically acceptable programs.

Singer, who is general counsel for the Federation of American Scientists, was graduated from Swarthmore in 1951 and from Yale Law School in 1954.

Restaurant Society Establishes Fund

The Pennsylvania-Restaurant Association has established a loan fund to aid students in food service and housing administration undergraduate programs or associate degree students majoring in hotel and food service.

The association has given $10,000 to establish the loan fund, which will be available only to residents of Pennsylvania who have completed at least one academic term at the University.

Other qualifications include an All-University average of 2.0 or higher, evidence of need and good character.

Selection of the students will be made after nominations by the head of the department and approval by the director of student aid.

A maximum loan of $500 has been set for any one student.

Conkey Heads Women's Week; AWS Names Booklet Co-Editors

Margaret Conkey (5th-liberal arts-Philadelphia) was named chairman of Women's Week Wednesday night at the Association of Women Students' Senate.

Judith Angerman (6th-journalism-McKeesport) and Jeanne Anthes (6th-psychology-Bridgeville) was selected co-editors of the Penn State Woman, a booklet prepared for incoming freshman women.

In other business, the AWS Senate approved a proposal to hold rotating meetings in order to acquaint more University women with the workings of AWS.

Under this plan, at least one meeting would be held in each residence area during the school year.

A revision in the elections code was approved which provides that any elections' candidate who violates the code will be ineligible to run in the new election held for that office.

This restriction, however, would not prevent her from running in any other AWS elections.

A change was also made in the election campaign posters which will permit candidates to list only three activities, preferably activities which qualify them for the elected position.
