Traffic Control

Borough, state and campus police, who are expecting the smallest crowd of the season, are planning no change in traf-fic control procedures. Officials estimate that the 30-35,000 spectators will bring only 7,500 cars to the parking areas at Beaver Stadium.

The traffic control pattern, which will go into effect at 10:30 a.m., includes one-way traffic in the direction of the Stadium before the game and away from the Stadium after the game on the following the game on the following streets: E. Foster Avenue, E.

State and Maryland to do battle. Oct. 31 traditionally is the day of ghosts and magic spells, and these two teams have been haunted with both this year.

The ghos's are those of Pete Liske and Dick Shiher, who graduated last year after sparkling careers at quarterback for State and Maryland, respectively. After struggling along early in the season, their re-placements are just beginning to come into their own.

The ghoulish spell that has plagued the Lions and Terrapins this season has been a rash of injuries to front-line personnel. Both teams will be nampered considerably loday because of various bumps, bruises and ills.

Perfect Day Despite the invasion of about 4,000 students from College Park, a comparatively small crowd is expected for today's match in Beaver Stadium. The weatherman is forecasting "perfect" weather for the game, slated to get under way at 1:30 p.m.

It could turn out to be the "rubber" game of the season for each team. State and Maryarised anew last week in a letter by a group of 24 alumni to Pres-ident Eric A.
