

Strayer: Prowess, Brains Comprise Wrestling Success

By ALEX WARD

If you were to ask a follower of Penn State sports to take a word-association test and give him "wrestling" as the first word, the odds are good that you would get "Marty Strayer" as the immediate response. The two just naturally go together, like salt and pepper or bread and butter.

In the last three years the fortunes of State wrestling teams have been both good and bad, but during those years Strayer has chalked up a total of 28 wins, 3 losses and a tie in dual meet competition. What's more, he is now working on a win streak of 22 straight dating back to the first meet of last season.

But even with credentials like these, Strayer cannot be described as a spectacular wrestler. He is more of "a thinking man's wrestler." A con man might be an even better description. Anyway, what it all amounts to is that he can almost always be counted on to whip his man in the brains department. That, along with Strayer's ability on the mat, usually wins matches.

Those who have watched him perform throughout his career at State might swear that Strayer has a patent on the figure-four. Match after match, he wraps his opponent up into more twists than a beer pretzel. Hardly anyone escapes. The results can be seen in the riding time he amasses. A couple of times this year he has ridden a helpless foe for more than eight minutes.

Last year he topped an unbeaten season off with a first-place finish in the Easterns at 167 and finished high in the Nationals.

This year the post-season tournaments are yet to come, but already he has been selected as the Amateur Wrestling News' second team All-American 167-pounder.

The man on the first team is Len Kauffman of Oregon State, a familiar face to Strayer. It was Kauffman who eliminated him in the fourth round of the Nationals. Strayer had a 4-1 lead going into the last period but the westerner, noted for his pinning ability, got the fall and the Lion junior was out of it.

This year Strayer has received enough praise from rival coaches to fill a volume of the Encyclopedia Britannica. From Gerry Leeman of Lehigh to Sully Krouse of Maryland to Rex Peery of Pitt, every week they laud him.

His own coach, Bill Koll, calls his co-captain, "The driving force on this team."

"He works as hard as anyone on the squad," said the Lion tutor. "Marty leads by his example in practice and in the matches."

The secret to all this success is simple. A continuous exposure to the sport was all it took.

"I went to high school in Manheim," he said last night, "and wrestling is the biggest thing in the town. They start kids wrestling in the fourth grade there."

Strayer didn't start quite that soon. His family moved to Manheim when Strayer was a seventh grader, and his father, a long time fan of the sport, encouraged him to take it up.

After compiling a respectable record in his last two years of high school, Strayer enrolled in Wilkes College in Wilkes-Barre and did even better. As a freshman he won the Middle Atlantic Conference tournament, one of the biggest in the country for small colleges.

That tournament represented the highest thing a wrestler at Wilkes could win so with no more worlds to conquer, Strayer decided to set his sights on something bigger.

He wrote a letter to Charlie Speidel expressing an interest in Penn State. Speidel was more than happy to have such a promising freshman and he let Strayer know it. Marty transferred schools and the rest is in the record books.

This past summer Strayer participated in Olympic try-outs in Pittsburgh and along with Steve Erber and Roger Olesen attended a wrestling camp near Williamsport. The camp was run under the auspices of the Olympic committee and most of the top coaches in the country were present.

"It was a great experience," said Strayer. "However I don't enjoy Olympic style wrestling too much. College wrestling is much more of a challenge."

This being his last year, Strayer is naturally anxious to make a good showing in the Easterns and Nationals. Going by past performances one would have to concede that his chances are more than good.

After that, however, a number of doors are open to him. A person who uses his head in class as well as on the mat, Strayer has been accepted to business grad school both at State and at Maryland. He has also been offered a job with Armstrong Cork in Lancaster. As of now, he has made no decision.

"I graduate at the end of this term," he was saying, "and I think I'll just take it easy before making a decision. But no matter what I decide on, I would like to keep up an interest in wrestling."

Honorable Mention For Lions' Weiss

wins in their last 12 straight games. One game remains on the schedule.

Another interesting sidelight concerning Weiss' selection is the fact that Rick Park of Tulsa also gained a spot in the honorable mention listings. Park, a 20-point plus scorer this season, lives less than two miles from Weiss in Sayre, Pa.

"We played together all summer," Weiss said last night. "We also played against each other all through high school. Sayre and Athens are like one town."

Weiss' 15.3 scoring average in his sophomore year was high enough to make him the No. 2 scorer on the team that recorded a 15-5 record. Last year, when the Lions went 16-7, he scored at a 17-point clip.

Many laurels have come Weiss' way since he enrolled here in 1961.

Perhaps the most tangible honor was accorded him twice when he was named the most valuable player in the Motor City Classic each of the past two years. His trophies accompanied the Nittanites, unprecedented straight victories in the Detroit tournament.

Prior to the Detroit tourney, Weiss was instrumental in State's winning ways in the Sunflower Tournament in Kansas. In the first-round victory over Kansas, it was his 15-foot jump shot with a minute left that gave State a 50-48 victory.

Weiss achieved his own personal scoring high in the Lions' last defeat Jan. 5 when Duke defeated State at Durham. He reeled off 38 points against the Blue Devils, drawing the raves of rival coach Vic Bubas afterwards.

"You won't find many college backcourt men better than Weiss," Bubas said. "He's a great shooter and playmaker. Our scouting reports compared him to UCLA's Walt Hazzard (an All-American last year)."

Weiss is the third highest scorer in Penn State history, placing behind Jesse Arnette and DuMars. He has a three-year total of 1048 points and a 17 points per game career mark.

Dawn Fraser Plans Legal Action on Ban

SYDNEY (AP) — Dawn Fraser, still hoping to swim in her fourth Olympic Games, says she is being made a scapegoat by the Australian Swimming Union and that she'll fight.

Miss Fraser, winner of the gold medal in the 100-meter freestyle in the last three Olympics, was expelled from the union Monday for 10 years for alleged breaches of discipline during the Tokyo Olympics. Three other Australian girls were banned for shorter periods.

Nan Duncan, 17, and Marlene Dayman, 15, were suspended for three years each and Linda McGill, 20, for four years.

Miss Fraser and Miss McGill began legal action last night to get their suspension annulled.

Their lawyers plan to challenge the suspension, probably in New South Wales Supreme Court.

State G-Men Expected To Dominate Tourney

By ED CARPENTER

The competition, which will be of an intrasquad nature, should prove to be a rare treat for the three all-rounders, for it will mark the first time they will be competing against anyone of championship-calibre in the event.

"I think it's really going to help us," Jacobson said yesterday. "This will be the first time this season we'll be pressed, and I think it will help our routines."

There will be more at stake in the all-around than just the personal glory. Starting in 1952 when Jean Cronstedt turned the trick, Lion gymnasts have captured 13 straight all-around titles. Jacobson, with a 55.05 total last year, is the most recent winner.

The senior co-captain is the odds-on favorite to make it two in a row, but it's not going to be easy.

Isabelle, who finished second in last year's competition, is especially tough in the big tournaments, and would like nothing better than to finish first this year.

Cohen is also after the big prize, and should he make it, he could possibly achieve something only three other Lion performers have done since 1952—win three Eastern all-around championships, Cronstedt (1952-54), Armando Vega (1956-57 and 1959) and Greg Weiss (1960-62) are the only members of the select group.

"Ever since Weiss won it three years in a row, it's the only thing I've wanted," Cohen said the other day. "But for me to win, I'd have to have a great day, and Mike would have to break."

Barring any unforeseen occurrence, though, one thing seems certain. The all-around title should remain in the Penn State family.

"We'll win it this year" was how Wettstone summed it up yesterday.

Wettstone was able to enter three men in gymnastics decathlon, but he was still faced with the problem of who to eliminate. He decided on Culhane but has his senior performer entered in five of the six Olympic events.

Eastern gymnastics this season can be summed up in two words—Penn State.

Starting with a resounding 66-30 win over West Virginia on Dec. 5 and ending with an even more impressive, 85-33, victory over Temple a week and a half ago, the Lion gym team has completely man-handled eight teams.

More of the same is expected this weekend as the G-men travel to Temple for the 38th annual Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League championships.

Based on the season's performances, and if everything goes as everyone in the East expects, the Lions should walk away with everything but the gymnasium.

State, which was the best contingent in last year's competition winning 12 medals, could dominate this year's EIGL's as no other team in history.

A highlight in the two-day tournament should come in the all-around event, where fortunately, or unfortunately as the case may be, the only real competition will be among three Lion teammates—Mike Jacobson, Ed Isabelle and Steve Cohen.

Lion coach Gene Wettstone was faced with a problem all season that any coach would dream about. He had four all-around men—Jim Culhane in addition to the three mentioned above—but could only use one in the Saturday meets.

Things have been changed for the Easterns.

Wettstone was able to enter three men in gymnastics decathlon, but he was still faced with the problem of who to eliminate. He decided on Culhane but has his senior performer entered in five of the six Olympic events.

Sportswomen Compete in 4 Activities Busy Weekend for Coeds

By DONNA REDMAN

The Penn State sportswomen had a busy weekend when the swimming, fencing, basketball and gymnastics teams saw action.

The swim club, Naiads, held a critique session Thursday night to have all the numbers for this year's Spring Aquacade evaluated. Guests from drama, music, art and physical education criticized the over-all plan for the show. The guest list included were Walter H. Walters, head of theatre arts department; Martha A. Adams, head of women's physical education; Patricia Hagie, dance instructor; and Henry Hartman, Beth Thompson and Hans Tauchnitz from the audio-visual aids department.

Sections of the show are being considered for audio-visual taping on the University's new television station. The theme of this year's aquacade is "Circus." Individual numbers will portray various aspects of the circus and circus acts. Routines entitled "Children," "Grand Entry," "Horses," "Elephants," "Clowns," "Monkeys," "Jugglers" and "Tumblers" will be performed.

A solo entitled "People" will be done by Vi Knapp. The Interest Group will perform a routine called "Popcorn." The Spring Aquacade will be held April 22-24.

The coed gymnastics team traveled to Kent State Saturday to take part in a four-way meet with Kent State, Ohio State and Michigan State. The girls participated in four events; free exercise, balance beam, vaulting and uneven parallel bars. Penn State's Barbara Kurtz and Sharon Oaks took eighth and ninth places, respectively. Carolyn Bechtel, Virginia Eberhard and Nancy Harris took seventh, eighth and ninth on the uneven bars. Carolyn Baker placed fifth in vaulting.

Penn State will face Pitt and West Chester in a three-way meet this Saturday in the south wing of Rec Hall. Warm-ups will be from 12:30 to 1 p.m. and the meet will be held from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Three girls from each team participate in the four events.

The coed basketball team suffered its first loss of the season at Gettysburg, 55-36, Saturday afternoon. High scorer for Penn State was Marlys Plamer with 14 points. Annabelle Ambrose had eight points. Marvin Homer, six, Jeanne Grubb, five, Judy Keller, two and Ann Witmer, one. The team record now stands at 5-1.

The Harrisburg Division of the Amateur Fencers League of America held an open tournament here Sunday. Six students and two faculty members from Penn State competed in the tournament. The other five were from Lancaster.

Wolverines Top Press Cage Poll

By The Associated Press

The Vanderbilt Commodores, winners of the Southeastern Conference basketball championship, had their highest ranking of the season in The Associated Press' weekly poll Tuesday.

The Commodores climbed four places to fifth in the latest vote by a special panel of 41 regional experts.

Michigan continues in first place, followed by UCLA, St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania and Providence.

Michigan lifted its record to 19-2 last week by beating Illinois and Minnesota. UCLA, 22-2, defeated Stanford and California.

St. Joseph's is 24-1 after beating LaSalle 93-85, while Providence held its poll position although it lost its first game of the season, 71-57 to Villanova. Minnesota, 17-4, advanced two positions to sixth. The Gophers are followed by Davidson, Duke, Villanova and Brigham Young. The latter two are the only new teams in the Top Ten. They replaced Indiana and New Mexico.

ATTENTION PHOTOGRAPHY BUFFS!
Anyone interested in joining The Daily Collegian photography staff should report to the Collegian office, basement of Sackett Bldg., after 7 p.m. any day this week. Ask for John Lott. Positions are open for news, feature and sports photo work.
