HAS AN ENGINEERING CHALLENGE WAITING FOR YOU

Expansion and development programs of The Cleveland Twist Drill Co., offer immediate placement for Engineering graduates in ME, IE, and Metallurgy.

The Cleveland Twist Drill Co. is a medium sized, multi-plant internationally known leader in the manufacture of metal cutting tools, having foreign as well as domestic manufacturing operations.

Openings at the headquarters plant in Cleveland include the following positions:

PRODUCT DESIGN ENGINEER

Individual and group project responsibility in design, application and development of metal cutting and threading tools. Customer engineering as required by the development of new tooling programs by industry. Some travel.

MANUFACTURING ENGINEER

Determination of new or improved manufacturing processes, economic justification of machinery, writing machine tool specifications, debugging and cycling of equipment.

MACHINE DESIGN ENGINEER

Creative assignments in design of special metal cutting and forming machines, includes writing specifications, making preliminary layouts, supervising designs and draftsmen and follow-up debugging.

METALLURGICAL ENGINEER

Product and process development, product performance and evaluation, applied research in tool materials and other laboratory and engineering projects concerned primarily with high speed steel, tungsten carbide and related alloys.

These are challenging positions offering immediate responsibility and advancement opportunity to B.S. and M.S. graduates.

Principal fringe benefits include profit sharing, relocation assistance, retirement program and full reimbursement of education tuition.

Make an appointment today to meet our representatives when they visit Penn State on October 12.

Yaz Slams Two Homers

Sox Win Evens Series

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Lonborg flirled with a perfect game and wound up with a one-hitter and Carl Yastrzemski's 14th homer, two electrifying homers yesterday to even the World Series with a 5-0 Boston victory over St. Louis in the rain-splattered second game.

A tense crowd of 35,188 thrilled to Lonborg's brilliant pitching that awoke memories of Don Larsen's perfect game for the New York Yankees in the 1956 series.

Not a man reached base and 19 Cardinals had been retired in order until Curt Flood finally walked on a 3-2 hit with one out in the seventh.

The no-hitter still was alive into the eighth when a light shower and sudden dark clouds forced the light to be turned on. By this time, the game had been locked up by Yastrzemski's second homer, a three-run 430-foot blast into the bleachers for a 5-0 lead.

Blister Bothers Lonborg. Lonborg, ever aware of the no-hit possibilities, was working with a blister on his right thumb, both in his breaking ball and curve.

A rousing cheer arose when Tim McCarver grounded out to second base. The noise mounted when Rico Petrocelli, a demon in the field all day, tossed out Mike Shannon.

The air went out of the no-hitter when Julian Javier slashed a double into the left field corner. But Lonborg never missed a stride. He blew down pinch hitter Bob Tolan to complete the eighth and knocked off the Redbirds, one-two-three in the ninth.

This handsome, 24-year-old, razor-cut St. Louis grad thus matched the three previous no-hitters thrown in Series competition. Ed Reulbach had one for the Chicago Cubs in 1906, and Claude Passeau for the Cubs in 1945. But Floyd Bevens, of the Yanks had lost his one-hitter in 1947 when "Cookie" Lavagetto doubled off the right field wall for a 3-2 Brooklyn victory with two out in the ninth.

Yastrzemski skipped batting practice and took a 45-minute nap in the clubhouse after hitting...

...for 20 minutes in a special drill after Wednesday's game in which he went hitless. It paid off with two homers and a single and four runs batted in.

The man who carried the Red Sox on his back to the pennant and everybody's choice for Most Valuable Player honors, slammed a 360-foot homer into the sixth row of the right field stands in the fourth. The blow broke up a scoreless battle between Lonborg and Dick Hughes.

With Lonborg pitching the best game of his career, in which his last start and 22nd victory had been Sunday's clinching win over Minnesota, that first run was all he needed.

Seventh Inning Homer. Rico Petrocelli fumbled Flood's shot for an instant in the same fourth inning and then gunned him down. It was Petrocelli, the dandy little shortstop, who did it again in the sixth on Dal Maxvill's hopper behind second base and it was Rico to the rescue again for a fine play on Orlando Cepeda's smash behind second for a force play on Flood to end the seventh.

Extra Police Order: 1 Extra police had been ordered to the dugout area to avoid any repetition of the wild mob scene that followed Lonborg's Sunday effort. There was no trouble this time although a knot of fans appeared around the 22-game winner when he bowed out of the dugout for a moment.

Yaz and Lonborg simply took matters into their own hands this day. The Sox added another run off Hughes in the sixth when he was driven to cover on two walks and an error by Shannon on Jerry Adair's smash off his chest. Don Willis replaced Hughes and was pitching when Petrocelli drove in George Scott with a long sacrifice fly to Flood in deep center. The run, of course, was charged to Hughes, the 16-6 performer in regular season.

Willis' Wild Streak. In the seventh Willis ran into a wild streak. Jose Tartabull walked and Jones singled past Shannon to left. With the rain coming down quite hard, Red Schoendienst went to his bullpen and brought in a southpaw pitcher, Joe Hoerner, to face the left-handed batter Yaz.

It didn't work as Yaz went to 2-2 and then drove the ball deep into the center field bleachers, driving in Tartabull and Jones ahead of him.

First word from the clubhouse was that Lonborg had a little blister on his right thumb that developed in the seventh inning. Dick Williams, the manager, said the blister bothered his breaking ball and curve but never reached the point where he was thinking of taking him out.

"Pressure," said Williams in answer to a question. "No, this was fun. You should have been here the last half of the season to see what pressure is."

Bell Scheduled. Williams said he will pitch Gary Bell Saturday in St. Louis against the Cards' Nelson Briles after Friday's off day for travel.

"It will be Jose Santiago, Wednesday's loser in the Sunday game," said Williams. "And then Lonborg will wrap it up Monday."

Varsity Rifle Team Sets Dates for Tryouts. Varsity Rifle Team tryouts will be held Saturday and Sunday 6:30-9:30 on Monday and Tuesday 1-5 at the Rec Hall Rifle Range. Tryouts are open to all fourth term students in good standing.

They Call Him The Great One

By RON KOLB Assistant Sports Editor

Within the past few weeks, almost every newspaper in the country received a flashy blue and gold press brochure in its sports mailbox. A UCLA pompon girl is leading a cheer at the top of the pamphlet, while Bruin defensive halfback Mark Gustafson is snaring a pass in interception at the bottom.

In the center is the stop-action photograph of number 16, pausing behind the line in search of a receiver. Above his golden helmet is his title: "The most exciting football player in the U.S.A."

Turn the page, and you can read 10 selected quotes about "how the experts see him."

Joe Paterno, Penn State head football coach, said "He is the best quarterback I have seen in several years. I would compare him to Roger Staubach. He is a great passer and his speed to the outside gives UCLA an added threat."

A sports writer in Pasadena covered just about every aspect of the game when he said, "He does everything. He fakes. He plays ahead on keepers. He rolls out. He passes accurately. He is a rounded quarterback with good poise and judgment."

Without going on to find out who this mystery phenomenon is, you'd almost swear Johnny Unitas or Bart Starr were running for President, and their public relations agents were giving them advanced billings. Not so.

Then open the brochure to the inside, and in bold letters at the top is "The Great One." Jackie Gleason? Of course not, it's Gary Beban, UCLA's passer, runner, genius and magician. If it were up to his coach, Tommy Prothro, Beban could go out on the field alone against any opponent, spot the other team two touchdowns and still win by three.

The 6-0, 191-pound quarterback started as the Bruins' field general two years ago against Michigan State, which is quite a way to break in. Though UCLA lost, 13-3, the young sophomore ran 26 times for 103 yards and completed eight of 15 passes for another 69 yards.

Right there, Prothro knew he had something. Beban's second game was against Penn State at Beaver Stadium before a sellout Band Day crowd (sound familiar?). The backfield wizard did everything but park cars, though walkie talkie equipment in his electronic helmet provided some weird directions in the two-way radios of the parking attendants outside the stadium.

Despite the national attention created by the incident, Beban still showed his natural poise by running 21 times for 87 yards and two touchdowns, and completing seven of 14 passes for another 76 yards. It was enough to hold off a late State rally and to win, 24-22.

His junior year, in spite of a late-season injury, was just as great. His team only lost one game, and among the victories was a 49-11 annihilation of Penn State. Beban carried 11 times for 48 yards and two TD's and hit on eight of 13 passes for 132 yards.

This year looks to be just one of those seasons again. For instance, in the Bruins' first game against Tennessee, Prothro found his club down by two points with a little over four minutes to play. The coach pulled his star over to the sidelines during a time out and said, "Gary, I need just one big play."

Beban went back into the game, took the ball around right end, cut sharply to the middle and outspint his nearest defender to the endzone for a 27-yard score. UCLA won, 20-16, as The Great One rushed for 72 yards and passed for 107, scoring two TD's.

The Pitt game two weeks ago was another typical exhibition of the senior's gridiron skills as he guided his club to a 40-8 romp. Last week Beban scored two more as the Bruins viciously downed Washington State, 51-23.

The 21-year-old is a history major with a solid "B" average. On the field, he's a terror, and he's far from average. Like the time against Southern California when he hit on two scoring bombs, one for 34 and the other for 52 yards. One moment UCLA trailed with four minutes left, 16-6. The next moment they had won, 20-16.

The West Coast school doesn't advertise about its favorite son just to get rid of some paper and ink. The Heisman Trophy balloting comes up at the end of the year. Then the scribes pick All-Americans, and All-Star representatives, and pro draft prospects. The way things have gone over the past 23 games in which he has played, Beban better start dusting off his trophy case and start cleaning out his wallet.

Penn State fans going to tomorrow's game better start dusting off their binocular lenses and start cleaning up their descriptive adjectives. They might need them.

Cards Got Nothing Off Lonborg

BOSTON (AP) — Most of the St. Louis Cardinals players felt Boston's Jim Lonborg was throwing the pitches to the right spot but their bats just weren't connecting.

"He was throwing them right in there," Manager Red Schoendienst said after Lonborg and the Red Sox beat St. Louis 5-0 in yesterday's second game of the World Series.

There was more talk in the Cardinal dressing room about Carl Yastrzemski, the American League's leading hitter who went without a hit Wednesday but cracked two homers yesterday.

"I got the pitch almost where I wanted it," Hughes said in discussing the first Yastrzemski homer, a blast into the rightfield corner. "It was a fast ball."

Body Moves. "His (Yastrzemski's) body moves toward their dugout on the first base side," Hughes said. "His style is similar to (St. Louis catcher) Tim McCarver's."

Joe Hoerner, normally the Cardinals' most effective lefthanded reliever, gave up the second Yastrzemski homer, a three-run blast, just after he replaced Ron Willis on the mound.

"I threw a fast ball up high," Hoerner said. "I got two strikes on him high and inside, but I didn't quite get the one he hit where I wanted... And boy, did he hit it."

Julian Javier, the brilliant-fielding St. Louis second baseman, spoiled Lonborg's bid for a no-hitter with a sharp double to the leftfield corner in the eighth inning.

"I hit a good pitch," Javier said. "He threw me some good pitches all day." He added that he felt the ball was in there when it left the bat.
