GOP Hopefuls Start Cramming For '68 Political Examinations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like schoolboys cramming for final exams, Republican presidential hopefuls are delving into their notebooks for next year's political examinations. These ball-box tests still are a winter away.

The candidates are being tutored by small armies of experts—men busily assembling ideas, examining issues, packaging proposals charting strategy and, in some cases, raising money and building nationwide organizations.

"Now is the time," one such tutor said, "when the homework will be done for next spring's drills." Current efforts are concentrated on what he called "the three R's—reading, writing and research."

Nixon Suite
In an office suite in New York's bustling Wall Street district for example, former Vice President Richard M. Nixon and his aides are producing speeches and articles on domestic issues—plus an "issue-oriented" book by Nixon scheduled for publication in late winter.

And in another office suite, a few blocks from the Michigan state capitol in Lansing, Gov. George Romney's advisers have worked for months on a foreign policy plank calling for neutralization of troubled Southeast Asian nations.

Other GOP possibilities—New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, California Gov. Ronald Reagan and Illinois Sen. Charles H. Percy—insist they aren't running.

Nonetheless, Reagan is continuing his out-of-state speaking tours and now is considering a trip to Vietnam. While Rockefeller appears to be doing nothing on the subject, Romney and his supporters are beginning to take soundings in the Midwest.

Interviews with professional politicians in Washington and elsewhere show most think Nixon now is far ahead in the scramble for the right to oppose President Johnson's expected re-election bid.

Topa Poll
Last week Nixon topped an Associated Press poll of delegates to the 1968 Republican National convention as their favorite for next year's GOP nomination. A majority said they favor a Nixon-Reagan ticket.

Romney strategists, conceding they lag in the polls, hope the Michigan governor's political stock will rise now that he has formally entered the race. His announcement Saturday came six weeks or more ahead of the time candidates traditionally disclose their intentions.

Runs Risk
But some politicians say if Romney starts an aggressive campaign now, he runs the risk of losing momentum before the GOP convention in Miami Beach, Fla., next August.

Romney embarks Dec. 7 on a trip through Europe, the Middle East, Southeast Asia and the Far East. On his return he is expected to swing quickly into the New Hampshire primary campaign by pounding away on his proposal for neutralization of North and South Vietnam—a plan he says would "defuse the war."

Although everyone agrees Nixon has a comfortable lead in New Hampshire now, his associates expect the drive to narrow upon the campaign starts there. "Nixon by one touchdown or less," is how one sees the outcome of the March 12 primary balloting.

Write-In for Reagan
Reagan's supporters are planning a write-in campaign in New Hampshire—an effort the California governor has disavowed. His name probably will appear on primary ballots in Wisconsin, Nebraska and Oregon, where he can't remove it without signing an affidavit swearing he is not a candidate for president.

Nixon men expect Reagan supporters to wage well-financed, professionally managed campaigns in both New Hampshire and Wisconsin. "We don't view it as anything but a tough, vigorous horse race," one said.

Scores of Speeches
Percy, steadfastly denying presidential ambitions all the while, has made scores of speeches across the nation since his election to the Senate last year. And, according to his special Chicago consultant Tom Houser, he may go to Vietnam sometime next year on a fact-finding tour.

Houser describes Percy's stance this way: "He simply reserves the right to watch this thing unfold and make his decision accordingly."

HUB Gallery To Show Five Centuries of Religious Prints

An exhibition of 50 original etchings, engravings, lithographs and woodcuts, representing a panorama of nearly five centuries of religious print-making, will be on display at the University from Dec. 2 to 28.

The exhibition, entitled "Religious Prints from Durer to Rouault," and on loan from the George Bihet Collection, Brimfield, Mass., will be set up in the Hetzel Union Building gallery.

According to Richard Fraenkel, director of exhibitions for the College of Arts and Architecture, gallery hours will be 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. daily.

Although the subjects have remained essentially the same through the five centuries represented in the exhibition, the approach of the artist has introduced elements of change and development.

In earlier times, says Fraenkel, the artist's viewpoint was regional but distant; later in becoming more humanistic and emotional, included will be some of the 19th century works of Durer,

Rubens and other 17th century works by Van de Passe, Caracci, Lanfranco, Della Bella and Pasqualini; 18th and 19th century masterpieces by Caylus, Fauci, Skips and Farlow, and the 20th century creations of George Rouault, considered by many as the greatest artist of our time in religious subjects.
