

From Brooklyn College

Dean Stroup To Speak

HERBERT STROUP

Herbert Stroup, dean of students at New York City's Brooklyn College and professor of sociology and anthropology, will speak at the University Chapel Service at 11 a.m. Sunday in Schwab.

His topic will be "The New Face of Service."

The Chapel Choir, with Raymond Brown directing, will sing the Virgil Thompson arrangement of the Southern hymn tune, "My Shepherd Will Supply My Needs." Organ music by June Miller will include works by Bach, Couperin and William Walond.

Stroup will also conduct a public discussion on freedom and responsibility in higher education at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Memorial Lounge of the Helen Eakin Eisenhower Chapel.

Stroup is the author of "Bureaucracy in Higher Education" and of other books and articles. He has traveled widely in church-related work, starting in 1953-54 when he was director for Greece of the Congregational Christian Service Committee. He has visited various Arab countries, Israel and nearby all the European countries. In 1966 he conducted a study of social development at the invitation of the Christian Council of Malawi, Africa. In 1959 he headed a study team to survey refugees in West Bengal, India, for Church World Service.

A graduate of Muskingum College, Stroup obtained the bachelor of divinity degree at Union Theological Seminary, and his doctorate from the New School for Social Research.

SDS To Hear Goodman

By JIM HARVEY
Collegian Staff Writer

Students who will speak on campus revolution at the SDS meeting, which will meet with the Freedom Union, a student draft counseling organization, Student for a Democratic Society, and all other interested people to discuss draft resistance at 4:30 p.m. today in 108 Forum.

Malorie Tolles, a member of SDS, said "Goodman has supported the draft resistance movement, stating that he is as responsible for counseling men to avoid the draft as Dr. Spock and those who are presently being indicted for it."

Members of SDS voted earlier this week to publish a pamphlet for next term "to replace misconceptions of their philosophy and purpose with information." "An important part of this 'White Paper,'" stressed Jeffrey Berger, a member of SDS's Central Committee, "is to show the relation of this University to the whole nature of U.S. imperialism."

Bookstore Petitions Norman Schwartz suggested having petitions on the University bookstore and tuition issues available at Spring registration

"to arouse interest on local issues directly affecting students."

Arnold Bodner agreed that it was necessary to "open fissures in the social-University structure in this way if people are ever to see through to their personal responsibilities in national and international affairs such as the Vietnam War."

"The largest action," Berger explained, "will be the 'Ten Days in April,' starting April 20, during which lectures, movies, teach-ins, and workshops will be arranged to arouse student interest and encourage their participation."

Chuck Killman of the Freedom Union, which he explained, "presents the individual with his draft obligations and alternatives," said his organization would also participate in the "Ten Days in April" program.

The Cultural Revolution Program, initiated by SDS this term, is also to be revitalized and expanded Spring Term.

Involvement Miss Tolles, who helped to organize the program, explained that while SDS is initiating the movement by "bringing Penn State students and faculty together to read their own works, see and discuss films, hold forums, etc., these people must perpetuate it by their own involvement. The program, the dialogue, the communication," she warned, "will only last as long as the energy of its participants—Penn State students and faculty—lasts."

The reorganization of SDS earlier in the term which placed more emphasis on small study groups to read and discuss various publications, rather than having ineffectual mass meetings, was also considered. There was some sentiment that the members did little else than "shoot the bull" at the study group gatherings. Other members, however, thought that they provided a solid self-education program for SDS members, though outwardly-directed activity had consequently suffered.

EISENHOWER CHAPEL

Construction Gets O.K.

The University will be over-run with construction workers this summer, as work begins on a new auditorium, an addition to Helen Eakin Eisenhower Chapel, and four new tennis courts.

Final plans for the Auditorium and Lecture Hall Building, to be constructed here by the General State Authority, have been approved by the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.

The Trustees also approved sketch plans for Unit 3 of the Life Sciences Building, also a General State Authority project.

The Auditorium and Lecture Hall Building will be constructed on the site of the University Press Building, east of Shortlidge Road and south of Tyson Building. It will have a seating capacity of 2,600, with 1,700 on the main floor, 460 in the first balcony, and 350 in the second balcony.

Trustees of the University have also approved plans for the addition to the Eisenhower

Chapel and authorized officers of the University to obtain bids and award contracts for construction.

It is expected that bids will be requested during the summer, as soon as the architects have completed detailed plans and specifications.

The new unit will be built to the west and south of the present building and will be financed with funds from the family and friends of the late Mrs. Milton S. Eisenhower, for whom the building was named, and from the University.

Final plans for the four tennis courts, to be located east of the East Halls area, and south of the courts now located there, were approved by the University at the end of February. Construction will be completed during the summer.

composed of students and faculty. Members buy shares in the cooperative and from time to time receive dividends.

Lewis said the shares or certificates in different cooperative ventures range from $1 to $10. The problems of many cooperatives and university bookstores are often the same; maximum use of sale space, turnover of stock and theft.

"It is very difficult to meet costs, and then have some profit, when the volume of sales is large only eight weeks out of the year," Lewis said.

Commenting on the circulation of student and faculty petitions favoring a University bookstore, Lewis said "it is difficult to interpret petitions. They are expressions of sentiment, but unfortunately they don't change the facts and variables encountered in the decision-making process."

Suggested improvements in the requisitioning of required texts are being worked on by Paul Althouse, vice president for resident instruction, with the aid of Undergraduate Student Government.

Lewis said effective changes in the procedure of ordering books are being reviewed.
