Indiana Town Gets Migrant Workers

ELWOOD, Ind. (AP) — This central Indiana city of 12,000, which has never had a non-white resident, is in upheaval over a project to settle Spanish-American migrant laborers in the community.

Three officers of Indiana Self-Help Housing Inc. have resigned. One reason was threatening, anonymous telephone calls.

An emergency meeting has been called Thursday night in hope of persuading the trio to withdraw their resignations.

When the Elwood Opportunity Center was closed recently, they feared the Self-Help project might be next in line for a similar fate.

Threatening telephone calls, two threatening her and her children. "I was born and reared in Elwood," she said, "and I can't talk about it."
