

USG Committee Plans Summer Term Events

By Art Santora
Collegian Staff Writer

The Summer Activities Ad Hoc Committee met last night to discuss their plans for Summer Term events.

The student government orientation program which will take place tonight in the HUB assembly room was outlined by Undergraduate Student Government representative Ed Beckwith.

The program will cover various aspects of student government at Penn State and will feature a discussion by USG congressmen, an explanation of the commission system by USG congressman Don Paule and an informative view of executive organizations by USG president Ted Thompson. Smaller discussion groups will then be formed which will explain to the new students such concepts as "in loco parentis" and "institutional racism."

USG president Thompson stated that the discussions which are planned on a weekly basis will help "bring freshmen into the picture" of student government. He also announced that freshmen will be permitted to run for USG positions next term.

The Colloquy program which plans a series of panel discussions August 5, 6 and 7 was also presented. A workshop discussion of drugs will be held Tuesday in the parking lot behind Beaver hall in the Pollock area. On Wednesday racial issues will be discussed. The Summer Colloquy program will end Thursday with a program on student involvement. It has not been decided whether a keynote speaker will be scheduled for Colloquy.

Men's Residence Council and Association for Women Students are adding to the social calendar with two Saturday night jammies. A jammy will be held in the Pollock Union Building recreation room from 9 p.m. until 12:30 a.m. July 12. July 19, the Splash Party jammy will be held in the Natatorium from 8 until midnight.

Joe Loftus, MRC president, announced a series of talks to be held at 6:30 p.m. in the PUB recreation room. Tonight there will be a talk and film presented by two representatives of Vista. Thursday, Students for Democratic Society will present a program. A "guitar-in" is scheduled for 2 p.m. Sunday in the Pollock quadrangle. Any student may participate.

Rich Christensen, of the United Campus Ministry, stated UCM plans for a discussion series which will take place at 9 p.m. every Thursday in 123 PUB. The discussions will be led by Bob Boyer of the UCM staff, and this week's topic will be "How to Become a Virgin."

Steelmen To Arrive

Almost 130 steelworkers will arrive at the University on Sunday for the Steelworkers Institute, an educational and social experience planned through the joint efforts of the United Steel Workers of America and the department of labor studies.

One purpose of the Institute, in its 24th year at the University, is to help workers "become more confident, to be better able to deal with management, to be better educated, and to get in the habit of asking questions," according to Wells Keddie, instructor of labor studies who will teach at the Institute.

Union men from all over Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia are elected by their local unions to attend the Institute one week each summer for four years. These men range from members of the rank and file to union presidents said Keddie. He said their jobs may be canning, basic steel, or steel fabricating.

"Steelworkers, Negroes, and Students" is the theme of the Institute this summer. This theme is to be carried out in the classes, discussions and the opening and closing statements.

This year the department of labor studies has initiated a plan to permit student involvement in the Institute. It is an experiment designed so that "students and steel workers can get to know each other on a personal basis," said Keddie. Richard Hindel, instructor in labor studies and co-chairman of the Institute, said all students are welcome to attend any of the functions during each of the three week long programs.

Steelworkers attending for the first time will study the history and philosophy of the labor movement and communication skills. The second year group will concentrate on economics while the third will study sociology and political science oriented to the local community. Fine arts and humanities is the topic for fourth year participants who will study art, literature, poetry and the theatre.

Hindel said a great deal of interchange of ideas and learning goes on in informal situations, out of classrooms and at the picnics which will be held on Monday of each week at 4:30 p.m. at Penn's Cave. Students are also invited to the picnic.

Keddie remarked on the enthusiastic response of the steelworkers in the past to a 10 per cent sale of many kinds of books. The sale is sponsored by the labor studies department in the Keller Building.

Films pertinent to the theme are among the scheduled events. "Remedy for a Riot," a movie about the disorders in the cities, will be shown to all four groups. The other films include "The Inheritance," a movie on labor history, "Anatomy of a Lie," "Women Must Weep," and "Allison Course."

The subjects of the workshops to be held Wednesday afternoons are legislation, consumer protection, arbitration, and the oral history project (writing local union history). Among the speakers are James Conners of the Pa. League for Consumer Protection; Mrs. Alice Hoffman of the labor studies department; and Julius Uehlein, a steelworkers staff representative.

Close to 150 steelworkers are expected to attend both the second and third weeks of the Institute. They will arrive each Sunday afternoon for registration and leave on Friday afternoon. They will be housed in West Hall dormitories. Most of the activities will be held in the Keller Building. John Beatty is the University conference coordinator who worked with the union and the labor studies department on housing, room assignments, meals and administrative details.

Any student interested in attending the functions of the Institute should contact Richard Hindel, 315 Keller Bldg.—KM
