GSA elects senators

By STEVE MESICS
Collegian Staff Writer

The Graduate Student Association yesterday announced the results of the election of the graduate student senators for the new University Faculty Senate.

The new senators are Neal H. Simpson, William J. Barnes, Robert A. Sedlack and Irwin Weintraub.

Eight graduate students ran for the four Senate seats.

This will be the second term of office for Barnes. He also has served on the Executive Council of the GSA and was chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee.

Sedlack also has served on the University Senate during the past year, representing both the graduate students and GSA.

Promises Investigation

Weintraub, who will begin his first term as a senator, promised an investigation of medical care and alleged unethical business practices by local merchants. He recently sponsored a bill calling for a University-wide boycott of non-university letuce, which was approved by the GSA.

Simpson, who is currently chairman of the GSA Equal Opportunity Program committee, also will begin his first term on the Faculty Senate. Simpson declined to give a personal viewpoint, promising to solicit the majority opinion.

Senators represent the GSA have recently received a 10 per cent voting privilege on the University Faculty Senate.

The GSA also announced that the University Department of Maintenance will begin work this week to improve East Aaron Drive.

Improve Road

At the April 27 meeting of the GSA, a resolution to improve the road was passed by the Council delegates. The resolution also called upon the University to assist the township in maintaining the road.

The GSA also will head a statement in support of The Other Vision: Homophilus of Penn State and discuss University President, John W. Oswald's recommendations concerning student involvement in the University.

A statement calling for the GSA to condemn the actions of the rulers of Pakistan will also be introduced at the meeting.

Oswald opens conference; describes campuses 'cooler'

HARRISBURG (AP) — University President John W. Oswald, said Friday college campuses are cooler this year because students are turned off by violence.

In addition, the institutions have learned to deal more constructively with their problems, said Oswald who assumed his present post last July 1.

Oswald was the main speaker at opening sessions of the Pennsylvania Press Conference sponsored by the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association, the state Society of Newspaper Editors and related journalistic groups.

Quinton E. Beague, general manager of the Williamsport Sun-Gazette, received the Press Conference's annual award for meritorious service. The Pennsylvania Medical Society gave plaques and monetary awards for writing in the health and medical fields to David M. Cleary of Philadelphia Bulletin and a joint citation to Robert McCarthy and Patrick Boyle of the Dardanel Publications at Monroeville.

The luncheon speaker was Louis Cassels, Washington columnist of United Press International.

He spoke of the need for honesty and objectivity in news reporting as one way to win back public confidence in the news media.

Peter Arnett, New York City correspondent for the Associated Press, was to speak at the awards dinner later.

Oswald said the most frequent question posed to him since leaving the No. 2 spot at the University of California's campus system to come to Penn State was why he would leave.

In a rhetorical answer, he assured the journalistic group
