

And they say baseball's dull

BASEBALL MAY SUFFER from long periods of grimaces, bases on balls, and the like but the action is sometimes worth waiting for. In this play from the Cornell-Penn State doubleheader on Saturday, first baseman Mark Tanner is receiving a throw too late to get the Cornell runner. Mike

Penn State's heaviest hitter defends Lions with home runs

By TERRY NAU

Collegian Sports Editor Okay, Mark Tanner, just how are you doing it. Hitting those home runs, I mean. You aren't as big as Mike Egleston. You bat seventh in the lineup. You ground out when people are watching and then hit home runs while the campus is enruns while the campus is en-raptured with the Blue-White Egleston, as everyone remembers, is the huge first baseman who led Penn State batters in everything from intentional walks to home runs last year. Collegian sports writ-er Jay Finegan once wrote that Mike resembled a rhinoceros charging a jeep when he ran the base paths.

So how do you do it, Mark Tanner? Let's have an account of those four home runs and 19 runs batted in you have. How come you never complain when coach Chuck Medlar buries you in the seventh spot in the line-up? Get up on the witness stand, Mark Tanner.

"Well, that home run I hit on Saturday came on a waist-high fast ball," Tanner said as he sat down. "I was just happy to hit it out."

About those rbi's, Mark. You're not supposed to be getting so many from the seventh spot in the lineup.

"I'm just happy to keep hitting with men on base," he pleaded, "Every time I come up there are men on base. Maybe the pitcher isn't concentrating on me as much as he does on the number three and four hitters in the lineup. I guess he relaxes a little bit."

Do you mind facing lefties, especially the two who slammed the door on Penn State in the second game against Cornell on Saturday?

"Our team has been facing quite a few lefties recently. Personally it doesn't bother me unless they throw the curve ball on the outside part of the plate. The fast ball looks just the same from either side."

What about your coach, Chuck Medlar? It seems like he never plays the percentages. He had four lefties in the lineup on Saturday, including his clean up hitter (tough question).

"Well,' I think he has been well, I think he has been doing all right. He sent John Galluppi (a lefty) up to hit in the second game and Galluppi got a hit. It doesn't make much difference. Of course, now that I've said that I'll probably

What are the playoff chance what are the playoff chances of this Penn State team. Mark? "We play Indiana today and Pitt a doubleheader on Saturdey. I would say we need wins in all three games. The tournament committee will have to take it from there."

Okay, defendant, you can get down off the stand. But consider this: The next time you sneak into the starting line-up, give the student body a break. Let them know you plan on hitting four home runs and knocking in six runners every time up. It looks like everyone has missed your act.

State's tourney train delayed

Penn State's tournament train, a vehicle which travels through almost anything but rain, finally was waylaid on Saturday after five con-

The second game loss, precipitated by a botched bunt play which led to four Cornell runs in the fifth inning, may have caused the NCAA District Two committee to look in another direction for a baseball team come Thursday when it is scheduled to meet.

May delay

"We may meet Thursday." said committee head Chuck Medlar," or we may wait until after we play Pitt on Saturday in a double-header."

Medlar's Penn State team could use the delay. It now stands at 10-4 with three games left before decision time. The Lions host Indiana today and then lay back until the crucial doubleheader with Pitt at Beaver Field.

Swanson could have pitched out of a rock-four hits and three walks. Third baseman Jon Stine and leftfielder George Landis collaborated for the deciding run in the second inning. Stine trip of and a point decided him home.

The only other happening in the first game was Mark Tanner's fourth home run in the sixth inning.

The second game was a scorcless battle for four innings with the Lion's Jim Conroy control problems to stay even.

"He was falling behind on the hitters," Medlar said, "and that was the key part of the game. The bunt was just bad execution." Fatal Fifth

The bunt came in the fatal fifth inning. After Conroy walked lead off hitter Bud Witosky, he fielded a bunt off the bat of Fred Hoge and threw the ball to second base. Catcher George Coval called the play.

It wasn't close. Two-run singles by Joe Meo and Pete Watzka ensued and the Lions were left for dead.
