

Sherkel whitewashes Indiana, 4-0

Just because Indiana University of Pennsylvania's baseball team looked like the sloppiest 11-1 team in the business, people were going around yesterday saying Rick Sherkel's great pitching wasn't anything to get excited about.

"A one-hitter, 13 strikeouts, so what," said the skeptics. "Indiana must have been playing the little sisters of the poor to get an 11-1 record. The only pitches Penn State wasn't hitting were the pickoff throws to first base."

Okay. IUP wasn't exactly the Baltimore Orioles. But you have to be impressed with Sherkel's arm, even if he does want to be a shortstop.

His one mistake came in the fourth inning when he threw a pitch to Paul Petroski. Sherkel threw it so hard Petroski could hardly get any wood on it. The ensuing feeble ground ball to shortstop was hit too slowly for Gary Murphy to make a play on. The only call could be a base hit.

After a sloppy third and fourth innings, when he walked two men and gave up the hit, Sherkel was flawless. He retired the last 16 men in order.

"I had good stuff in the early innings," he said after the game. "The heat seemed to make me stronger."

Sherkel's main problem is that he would like to get out under the hot sun more often. "I would like to play every day," he said. "I'm a shortstop or third baseman. Of course, I don't mind pitching. You get a chance to be in control of the game when you pitch."

Coach Chuck Medlar may put a roadblock in front of that idea. He has been going with pitchers Roy Swanson and Jim Conroy for most of the season, with relief pitching headed up by Sherkel. After yesterday, Sherkel may enter the regular rotation.

"I can't envision the day he would be playing shortstop for us," Medlar said after the game. "He'll be a pitcher."

For those of you who think Sherkel was the only Penn Stater on the field yesterday, consider this: Centerfielder Dennis DeWitt had two runs batted in in the first inning. His double to left center chased home Mike Smith and Harry Rogers with the only runs Penn State really needed.

The Lions added a single counter in the second inning on a double by Mark Tanner, which IUP's centerfielder avoided like the plague, and two more botched plays by the visitors. Details shall be avoided at this point in order to save the Indians from further embarrassment. Suffice it to say their shortstop seemed new to the position, their leftfielder couldn't see the ball in the sky, fielding bunts seemed foreign to their nature and wasted throws were an integral part of their game.

The best thing that could be said about Penn State was that it didn't join in the frivolity. Except for an error by third sacker Don Stine, Penn State stayed clean in the errors department.

EXTRA BASES — Sherkel relied mainly on a fast ball that tailed in on right handed hitters. After the fourth inning, he just threw his fast ball and challenged Indiana to hit it. The Indians didn't. Sherkel also throws a passable curve ball which is effective because of the slight change in speed. Fascinating material for the sports buff!

Ice Hockey Club begins play next year

Students at Penn State go through year after year of frigid weather becoming so sick of ice that they can't wait until the spring thaw. You wouldn't think there would be anybody up here who might want to move around on the ice during fall term, too.

Well, apparently '00 students would like to do just that. Rather than making their way across a barren parking lot, those people choose to play another sport, namely ice hockey. The program will be initiated during the first five weeks of next year's fall term with the games facing off in the Ice Pavilion. Plans have been made for the building to accommodate the ice hockey program. What this probably entails is constructing boards around the perimeter of the ice and installing a public address system to play the French National Anthem between quarters.

The players are to be broken down according to ability and there will be a club dues of $15 to take care of insurance. Anyone interested in becoming the first Bobby Orr with a bachelor of science degree should have his own equipment and can contact Rick Frazier, 865-6627, for any additional information.

Sports roundup Collision mars game

Heidemann, the shortstop, and left fielder Lowenstein were carried off the field on stretchers. Center fielder Pinson was helped off by teammates. All three were replaced in the field.

McCraw circled the bases for an inside-the-park home run as the three Indians lay motionless on the field for several minutes. Lowenstein and Heidemann were admitted to Doctors' Hospital for observation and X-rays. Pinson suffered a cut on the cheek which was treated in the Indians' dressing room. None of the three players was knocked unconscious in the collision.

Penn State said yesterday tickets for its Oct. 9 home football game with Army had been sold out.

Sellouts had been announced earlier for the Oct. 2 game with Air Force and the Nov. 6 encounter with Maryland.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Russell, former coach and star center for the Boston Celtics, and Larry Brown, Denver Rockets playmaker, yesterday were named coaches for the National and American Basketball Association all-star game May 28 at the Houston Astrodome.

Russell will direct the NBA team, Brown the ABA squad. The game has been organized by players from both leagues.

Russell paced the Celtics to nine NBA championships in 10 seasons. Brown, a leading ABA playmaker, previously coached the freshman team at North Carolina, his alma mater.

Penn State said yesterday tickets for its Oct. 9 home football game with Army had been sold out.
