

Students injured in accident

Four students were treated and later released Sunday at Ritenour Health Center for injuries in a car accident which claimed the lives of a Wilmington, Del. couple.

Logbook

Treated were Mary T. Morelli (4th-human development), Mary Jane Schuler (5th-individual and family studies), Sandy Weichman (4th-elementary and kindergarten education) and Debbie Bloomer (4th-counseling).
Calvin E. and Mildred J. Carl were killed in the three car crash on Rt. 322 about four and a half miles from Boalsburg.
Rockview State Police said Carl, driving east on Rt. 322, evidently lost control of his car when it skidded on snow while rounding a curve and went into the oncoming lane, colliding head-on with an auto driven by Gary Mackes of Hellertown.

Unable to stop, the Morelli vehicle struck the rear of the Mackes automobile after the first collision, police said.
Damage was set at about $500 for the demolished Carl auto, $800 for the demolished Macke car and $200 for the Morelli vehicle.

Donna Plummer (7th-home economics education) was treated for minor injuries at Ritenour Friday after being struck by a sign post.
According to State College police, Gary Mosier, of Hatboro, stopped at a stop sign on E. Hamilton Avenue at S. Garner Street, and failed to see a vehicle driven by Richard Fogle, of State College, approach north in the 700 block of S. Garner St.
Mosier's car struck the left rear of the Fogle auto, forcing the vehicle to slide sideways, jump a curb, cut down a singpost at ground level which was sent hurling, striking Plummer.

Early Sunday morning, a car operated by Kenneth Rye (10th-history) struck an auto driven by Denise Asp, of Pittsfield after Asp went through a stop sign at a ramp onto University Drive, State College police said.
Rye was taken to Ritenour for treatment of injuries after the crash. Damage to the Rye car was about $600 and to the other vehicle about $500.

Fire broke out in 118 Porter Saturday evening as candlemaking wax left on a hotplate ignited and spread to a nearby curtain.
Upon returning from the shower, the room's occupant noticed smoke coming from beneath his door. He brought the wax into the hallway, putting out the fire with an extinguisher. The building was evacuated as Campus Patrol was summoned to put out the blazing curtains. Smoke damage to the room and hallway was not estimated.

John Griffith (9th-individual and family studies) reported being robbed Sunday in the 100 block of Calder Alley. Griffith said a man described as 5 foot 10 inches, wearing an Air Force parka, blue jeans and tennis shoes put something in his back to threaten him, robbed him and then fled across the Pugh Street parking garage. The loss was not estimated.

A student reported that between 11 p.m. Saturday and 3:30 a.m. Sunday someone had entered his room in Geary and taken $25. He said he was not sure if the door was locked at the time.

Campus security reported there were no visible signs of forced entry.

Twenty-three students were apprehended early Sunday morning after a patrolman reported a loud party in the first floor study lounge of Runkle. The students, most of whom were under 21, allegedly had been drinking beer and wine.

A resident assistant reported no lighting Sunday evening in Sproul. Investigation revealed that the lighting and fire alarm systems had been turned off. Five breaker switches controlling heating and ventilating systems also were shut off.

12 to examine student deaths

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana Atty. Gen. William Guste appointed a 12-member commission yesterday to investigate the turmoil at Southern University that led to the deaths of two students.

Among those appointed to the panel were Revis Ortique, a black New Orleans attorney and former member of the President's Commission on Campus Unrest, and Turner Catledge, retired executive editor of The New York Times and a New Orleans resident.

Guste also named three other black officials and two students from Southern's New Orleans campus to the Commission of Inquiry.

Guste told a news conference the commission will initiate its investigation into last Thursday's violence at the University, the largest black college in the nation, beginning Nov. 27.

Two 20-year-old students, Denver A. Smith of New Roads, La., and Leonard D. Brown of Gilbert, La., were killed as sheriff's deputies and state police tried to break up a demonstration in front of the administration building. Autopsies showed they died of buckshot wounds in the head and shoulders.

The attorney general said the panel would meet in private, like a grand jury, because the evidence obtained may lead to criminal charges. He said he will use his office's subpoena powers and the witnesses will be under oath.

The attorney general said he had invited the Justice Department to cooperate in the investigation. The Justice Department had already announced an inquiry of its own.

Anti-abortion legislation goes to governor's desk

HARRISBURG (AP) — The House last night gave final approval to a strict anti-abortion bill that now goes to the governor's desk. But the date it arrives may determine whether it becomes law this year.

The vote, which came after pro-abortion lawmakers tried to kill the legislation by parliamentary maneuvers, was 127-50.

Once the governor receives the bill, he has 10 days to sign or veto the measure. If he does neither, the legislation becomes law automatically.

If the 10 days are up after the legislature has adjourned, the governor has the further option of vetoing the bill without giving lawmakers a chance to override his decision.

If the governor takes this option, new legislation would have to be introduced in the next session of the legislature. The governor's veto could not be overridden.

And that's where the date the bill arrives becomes important.

Gov. Milton Shapp has said the bill was unacceptable to him, indicating he would veto the measure. If he takes that action while the lawmakers are still in session, there's a good chance of an override, since both houses passed the bill by wide margins.

However, if the House fails to deliver the bill until today, it would arrive with less than 10 days to go in the legislative session — which ends Nov. 30. Then, Shapp could veto the bill after the lawmakers left.

Late last night, a decision on when the bill reaches the governor has not been made by Speaker Herbert Fineman, D-Philadelphia. Fineman is an opponent of the bill.

The legislation prohibits all abortions unless a woman's life is threatened by continued pregnancy. The governor's all-female Abortion Law Commission said the bill would be among the strictest in the nation.

There was little actual debate on the bill last night, since its merits were debated last June, when, in a pre-election vote, the House passed the measure initially by 157-34. Yesterday's post-election balloting had 30 fewer votes for the measure.

The House action yesterday was actually a concurrence vote, with the chamber accepting a Senate amendment.

Rep. Hardy Williams, D-Philadelphia, an opponent, did bring up an oft-repeated argument that "it's the poor people who will be victims of the butcher shops."

Other pro-abortion legislators offered motions to amend or delay the bill, but were voted down easily.

The chief backer of the legislation, Rep. Martin P. Mullen, D-Philadelphia called on Shapp to take quick action.

Homecoming complaint changes female criteria

A complaint charging discrimination in the Homecoming contest for outstanding women was resolved Saturday with a decision to omit sex from the criteria in next year's contest.

Eric Richardson (9th-biological health) filed the complaint against the University Union Board three weeks ago. He said then the contest was a direct violation of his civil rights because its criteria specified only females were eligible to be honored at Homecoming.

Richardson officially dropped charges against UUB at a hearing before the Undergraduate Student Government Supreme Court last night.

Richardson said UUB President Alvaro Umana told him after consulting with the UUB Executive Council "they decided they didn't really have any case."

Umana and Richardson drew up a letter indicating UUB's new position which will be sent to Richardson Monday and a copy of it placed in the UUB files for the 1973 Homecoming committee, according to Richardson.

Umana said UUB felt in order to make Homecoming more meaningful for both students and alumni its best course of action was to omit sex from the contest's criteria.

"The contest will be open to all Penn State students," Umana said.

Richardson said his complaint was an attempt to raise awareness of minority and sex discrimination on campus.

"In terms of tradition this will lead to the downfall of the contest," he said. "Next year there will be a Homecoming person who can be male or female."

Umana said other criteria for the contest will be determined by next year's Homecoming committee.

"I urge everybody with an interest in Homecoming to express their views to UUB," Umana said. "These views will be included in the report presented by UUB to the 1973 Homecoming committee," he added.

Draft boards fused

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Pennsylvania Selective Service Board has begun combining local draft boards in preparation for a slowdown in operations due to the proposed all-volunteer Army. Donald Croushore, deputy state director, said yesterday combining adjacent local boards would cut down rental space costs and allow better supervision of the boards.

Croushore said local boards in all the states were being consolidated. He added that no jobs were expected to be lost through the consolidations.
