

Buchanan to perform

Concert slated

Blues and country guitarist Roy Buchanan will be the featured performer at the Free University concert Saturday in Schwab.

The highly acclaimed musician will perform at two shows starting at 7:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Also appearing at the concert will be the rock group The Rhythm Kings, whose members are University alumni.

The concert is the first in a series of fund-raising programs sponsored by the Free U. Proceeds from this concert and later events will be put toward the production of this year's Festival of Life.

The Festival of Life is a three-day potpourri of music, arts and crafts, theater and workshops that will take place near Beaver Stadium at the beginning of June.

Festival coordinators receive $2,500 from Associated Student Activities and must provide $900 to cover the basic costs of overhead and management for the festival. Additional funds must be raised to provide musical entertainment.

"We would like to bring in groups from Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and New York," Al Hirsch, a member of the Festival of Life's organization, explained. "To make it possible to do so, we have submitted a proposal to the University Concert Committee for assistance in obtaining talent for the festival. However, we still have not received official response from them."

Tickets for the Buchanan concert will be on sale today through Friday on the HUB ground floor. Tickets are $2.50 each.

Auditorium: versatile

By GLENN BLANK
Collegian Staff Writer

Penn State's new auditorium, now being constructed just north of the women's athletic field, is expected to open officially in May 1974.

The actual construction, which began in summer 1971, will be finished by October, but installation of technical equipment will take until the following January.

"You never know what a building can do until you try it," Walter H. Walters, dean of the College of Arts and Architecture and a member of the auditorium's planning committee said. "The auditorium is acoustically designed so that it can be adjusted. It can be tuned."

Still officially unnamed, the building now goes by its project title, "Auditorium and Lecture Hall." The earliest plans for this project date back to 1965. Walters said when the committee first met to plan it in February 1966, he believed completion was possible by 1969, but he did not comment on why construction was delayed.

Walters said the new auditorium is necessary because "Schwab is simply limited in size, and Rec Hall is not an auditorium. For a university our size, this (the new building) will be a very good-sized auditorium."

The new auditorium will seat 2,600. Schwab seats 1,100, Rec Hall five or six thousand for large concerts. The seating in the new auditorium will be continental style, with no middle aisles. The audience will enter and exit from the sides.

"It's U-shaped," Walters explained. "The lobby will wrap around the seating area. There will be plenty of exits out the sides." The audience will sit in red mohair seats with wooden arm rests. On the floor, Allison said he and the planning committee hope, will be a deep purple carpet with red tufts. The walls and the ceiling, with its curved contours, will be a warm-toned grey. In the back, over the main audience, will be two balconies, one above the other.

Walters stressed the new auditorium's versatility. The stage and acoustics will be adjustable so that a single lecturer can speak only several hours after the performance of a large orchestra, he said.

William Allison, assistant to Walters and also on the planning committee, described the acoustical system in more detail. "There are reverberation chambers behind the ceiling. The management of the auditorium can adjust the acoustics by closing or opening the doors to these chambers," he said.

The auditorium will house drama, dance, films, and speakers and has facilities for a greater variety of musical events than now are possible in Schwab auditorium or Rec Hall, according to Walters. Some large classes also will meet there.

"Perhaps the separate film classes in theater arts could be combined into one large section," Walters said.

Opening ceremonies are being planned for May 1974. Walters said he expects the Penn State choir will perform with the visiting Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

Tracy exhibits work at Kern

Acrylics and watercolors by Janet Tracy, a doctoral candidate in the Department of Art Education, are on exhibit in the Commons Gallery of Kern through April 9.

Tracy earned a master of fine arts degree in painting at American University and taught art for six years in a Maryland secondary school before coming to the University.

She has studied and traveled throughout Western Europe and spent last summer in Florence and Rome on a Fulbright grant.

Her paintings have been exhibited in several individual and group shows at the Down East Gallery, Washington, D.C. Her work also appeared at Silver Spring and Town Square Art Shows.

The Kern exhibit features sixteen of these watercolors, which Tracy called experimental for her because of their circular format. "My first piece of that type was a print in 1968," she said, "the circle within a square form has always interested me, and that, combined with the chance characteristics of watercolors, seemed the best medium for the back road landscapes of Pennsylvania and Washington."

The gallery is open Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 11 p.m., Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 11 p.m.
