Oswald greets frosh, transfers

By JEFF DeBRAY
Collegian Senior Reporter

You are the one to decide how much you make out of Penn State. University President John W. Oswald last night told an incoming group of freshmen and transfer students.

"Education is not something we do to you or for you. It is an experience you seek out. The University will try not to limit you," Oswald said.

Penn State has much to offer all students, with the emphasis on offer, Oswald said. "How much you take up this offer is your voluntary choice. Each of us makes the decision of what we will do," Oswald said.

But Oswald warned students not to develop a "carefree" attitude: "These are the crucial years in which you devote your training to your life."

"One of the most basic freedoms up to you is to make as much or as little of this University as you want," he added.

Oswald also urged the students to take part in the programs the University has to offer.

"Seek out and make use yourself of this great University," he said. "You have to be a participant in it."

But Oswald urged the Rec Hall audience to "distinguish the periphery from the core."

"Keep in mind the core. In other words, set your priorities early," he warned.

Noting that this is just his third year at Penn State, Oswald said he shared "some of the mixed emotions you may have tonight."

"I know some of you are wondering what will happen next, and indeed if I am going to get lost on the campus."

"I found myself with some of the same feelings when called upon to welcome people to buildings I had never even been in," he said.

Oswald told the crowd he truly believes "in young people."

"Penn State is making as sincere an attempt as possible to be responsive to the needs of young people," he said.

Noting that the University is large and sometimes impersonal, Oswald said, "We recognize that just because something is large does not mean it is good."

"As it grows bigger it is our job to make it indeed seem smaller," he added, by working toward the creation of smaller units in the University.

Wishing the students "success as you join the Penn State family," Oswald told the newcomers always to keep an open mind. "Much of your success will depend on your own efforts," he said.

"In the vernacular of your day, don't blow it," he added.

Mills to reopen

TORONTO (AP) — One of Canada's largest newsprint producers said yesterday it will resume shipments this week, since the railroad strike has ended. Two other producers, plagued with labor problems of their own, still were shut down.

A spokesman for Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd., said its three plants in Ontario and Manitoba, which were closed by the railroad strike, will start production as soon as possible.

The spokesman said he anticipated no strike by the company's 6,000 workers, who are negotiating for a new contract.

Negotiations were still suspended between unions and officials of two other newsprint producers, which have been shut down by strikes.

Three plants of Canadian International Paper Co. in Quebec and New Brunswick have been closed by strikes since late July. Two plants of the Price Co. Ltd. in Quebec have been shut down since Aug. 10.

The paper mill strikes and the walkout of 56,000 railroad workers has caused a shortage of newsprint in the United States, which imports 65 per cent of its requirements from Canada.

Striking railway workers were ordered back to work by special legislation passed Saturday morning at an emergency session of Parliament.
