

NFL openers seem better at home 49,331 decide

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The National Football League has begun the era of the blackout ban to the accompaniment of a bedsheet proclamation expressing the attitude of some fans and underscoring the concern of the league.

"Will Swap Two Season Tickets, Umbrella And Steeler Pennant For One

Color TV," read a banner at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium as the NFL season opened Sunday under a congressional ban of blackouts in local areas of games that were sold out 72 hours in advance.

And a lot of ticket-holders agreed with the banners, staying home and watching the games on television.

Nine games were affected by the ban, and the NFL said

Monday those contests totaled 49,331 "no-shows"—tickets distributed which were not used.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said he was not surprised at the number of ticket holders who stayed away Sunday and predicted that the figure would grow as the season progressed.

"We will not go out of our way to prove our point," said Rozelle. "All we can do is develop the figures and prove what we have been saying all along."

What Rozelle has been saying about the lifting of the blackout is "potentially this could be the biggest threat in the history of pro football."

One owner, Leonard Tose of the Philadelphia Eagles, who had 4,617 no-shows, said he planned to do something about the "threat." "I can't do anything but live up to the letter of the law," said Tose, who added that he will sell seats with obstructed views and will not allow another home telecast of a home game unless every seat is sold. Obstructed seats normally do not figure in sellouts.

But a question about the validity of the no-show figures was raised Monday by Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., one of the major sponsors of the legislation prohibiting local blackouts.

"How many of those tickets are in the hands of scalpers?" Pastore wondered. And, he added, if the NFL is going to make a point about the no-shows, "I want to see the rosters of these people who buy big blocks of tickets."

An NFL spokesman said the league had no further comment on the matter of no-shows.

As for scalpers, at least one was unhappy.

"If the game hadn't been televised here, a $6 seat would have brought at least $12," said one young "businessman" outside New York's Yankee Stadium. "Today, if I'm lucky, I'll get $10 for a $6 seat."

Also feeling the pinch were people involved in concessions and parking, as well as motels and bars which did brisk business in drawing fans from blacked-out areas or which showed blacked-out games with special television equipment.

Roundup: Where's Nicklaus, Trevino asks

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Lee Trevino, normally amiable "SuperMex" of American golf, paused on the steps of an ancient Scottish clubhouse yesterday and criticized Jack Nicklaus.

Nicklaus and Trevino are fellow members of the U.S. Ryder Cup team which will play professional golfers of Britain and Ireland later this week in the biennial match of golfing strength.

"Some of us aren't happy about Nicklaus," Trevino told newsmen.

Newsmen at Muirfield, where the three-day Ryder Cup contest begins Thursday, were told that the football-loving Nicklaus stayed on in Miami, Fla., to watch his favorite team, the Dolphins, play the San Francisco 49ers Sunday.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench asked for and received an autographed photo from baseball great Hank Aaron of the Atlanta Braves Sunday.

The photograph showed Aaron sliding safely home in a close play at the plate in Friday night's game between the Reds and Braves.

Aaron added a footnote to his signature, writing: "To John — Try to stay the hell outta my way."

HOUSTON (AP) — Billie Jean King, the Wimbledon champion, said yesterday she would grant no interviews or make any personal appearances before her tennis match against Bobby Riggs in the Astrodome Thursday night.

Mrs. King, who defaulted at the recent U.S. Open championships because of illness, said she felt fine and was ready for the match, which was being billed as "The Battle of the Sexes."
