

Iowa foes are feasting on turnovers

Lauterbur: UCLA backs were faster

By RICK STARR
Assistant Sports Editor

Every sane football coach will tell you that if a squad makes big mistakes against tough teams, it's going to get killed. Iowa's Hawkeyes have made 12 major mistakes in its first two games this year and Michigan and UCLA have killed them.

The Wolverines squashed them 31-7 while UCLA almost annihilated Iowa after a close first half, 55-18.

What Hawkeye Coach Frank Lauterbur needs is a few Navys and North-westerns. Instead, the former Toledo head coach will greet his third biggie in a row when Iowa takes to the Beaver Stadium turf Saturday.

Penn State scout J.T. White has been flying all over keeping tabs on the Hawkeyes. Yesterday he said the team has been plagued by errors.

"The past two weeks I've been looking at Iowa versus Michigan and UCLA, and in both cases they've lost by turnovers," White said. "I think there were about five interceptions and about seven fumbles and doing this they have a hard time winning the ball games. I hope they continue this week against us."

"But they have a fine split receiver in Brian Rollins, who is the favorite of both quarterbacks. I remember last year he caught the touchdown pass that put Iowa ahead of us. Then in the last 31 seconds we had to come from behind. I hope that doesn't happen again."

Lauterbur indicated he expects no easy afternoon.

"As usual Penn State's a big, strong, physical ball club," Lauterbur said.

"They're undefeated and have only allowed six or seven points in the last two weeks. And their quarterback (Tom) Shuman is a big, strong roll out passer."

"Their backs aren't quite as fast as UCLA's, but the overall team is strong — as all Joe Paterno teams are."

Another piece of bad news was delivered to the Iowa head coach yesterday. Ed O'Neil will play.

The Lion linebacker was in on 12 tackles at Stanford but sat out the Navy encounter due to a fractured bone in his wrist.

"We think Eddy will play," Paterno said last night. "He practiced today and will probably be ready for Iowa."

Iowa's offensive line may also prove to be a headache for Lauterbur as, according to White, the line has not measured up to preseason expectations.

"The offensive line is very experienced," White said, "because last year Lauterbur played a lot of sophomores to get them experienced and they thought they would be greatly improved this year. However this has not turned out that way."

"I'm sure they'll be fired up for our game because they were so close to us last year."

Not nearly as fired up as Lauterbur probably was when he saw the first three teams on this year's schedule.

picked up the kicking tee and dashed off the field.

Quarterback Gary Rutledge took the ball from center on a quick snap, swung right, pitched wide to Wilbur Jackson who scored.

The rules committee said the play is illegal because it violates a rule that says a team cannot simulate a substitution "designed to confuse an opponent." Such a play carries a 15 yard penalty.

The News-Sentinel said the NCAA has notified its member schools of the committee's ruling.

Alabama walloped California 66-0.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A maneuver Alabama used in scoring its first touchdown against California has been declared illegal by the NCAA Rules Committee, the Knoxville News-Sentinel says.

The Alabama play went like this:

With the ball on the California 11, Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant sent in Bill Davis, a kicking specialist, ostensibly to attempt a field goal. No one came out, leaving 12 Alabama players on the field.

Alabama walloped California 66-0.

King-size limb breaks on Holmes Cathrall

By BILL GUTHLEIN
Collegian Senior Reporter

After one week Holmes Cathrall's face is still red.

The cause of this extended embarrassment for the Penn State tennis coach is the 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 trouncing of Billie Jean King gave to Bobby Riggs.

The normally conservative Cathrall called the match for Riggs as soon as the so-called "Battle of the Sexes" was announced. He and Riggs played the same tour together after the war so he was the man who would know.

As Riggs became bolder, so did Cathrall. He finally stepped out on the limb a little too far. He consented to a radio interview that was broadcast just prior to the match.

In it Cathrall claimed even a ranking junior player could defeat the women pros. He said the score depended on "how Riggs has put his money."

Cathrall has been regretting it ever since.

"I lost some money and a lot of pride," Cathrall said. "My daughter has been after me... that hurts. People have called, they write me letters. I don't want to answer the phone because every call is about that thing."

"I've been wrong about predictions before, but never that wrong. I'll never make another prediction."

In his own defense, Cathrall claims he never saw King play better or Riggs worse. The Lion coach pointed out that Riggs couldn't hit a shot past the service line or a lob over the head of Billie Jean.

"He couldn't play worse if he tried," Cathrall said, "Hitting short to Billie Jean is asking for your throat cut. It was a fiasco, a farce. It wasn't even good tennis."

Cathrall figures Riggs became overconfident and thought he could win without training. Stories of gambling and drinking became big stories in the papers but no one thought much about it.

As for Riggs' strategy, the Lion coach becomes hot under the collar just thinking about it.

"I think he's going senile," Cathrall proposed half-jokingly as the memories of last Thursday's disaster came back to mind.

"Rosie Casals tells everyone on TV that Billie Jean's strength is her backhand, and he plays her backhand. A man of his experience shouldn't play that way. And he was so out of shape it wasn't funny."

Hopefully Cathrall's netters will have more luck than his recent attempt at prognosticating tennis matches. The team faces a stiff testing when the fall Easterns get underway next week.

The Lions will be competing for the first time without graduated seniors Walker Shivar and Tom Wright. Shivar played behind head netter Jan Bortner while Wright held the fourth spot. Together they formed the top doubles team.

"So far I can't tell much," Cathrall said, "All I know is that Bruce (Issadore), Jan (Bortner), and Miguel (Maurtua) are playing extremely well. As for the rest, they're kind of doubtful."

So much for going out on the limb.
