Linebacker Dan LaFleur (55) makes it tough for Tom Shuman

Iowa learns from experience...

Playing football with Joe Paterno at Beaver Stadium is like drawing blackjack from a guy with a black patch over his right eye. It's like flipping your baseball cards with the kid who has metal cleats on the heels of his shoes and keeps a comb sticking half way out his pocket even though he's only in third grade.
You know you're going to lose, and you do, but you get something back. You get the experience, and that's what makes you a tougher guy and fixes it so that the next guy that comes along doesn't have it so easy.

Iowa coach Frank Lauterbur said he thinks his team grew a little wiser to the ways of the football world during its ordeal with Penn State Saturday afternoon.
And like the little kid who just lost his Sandy Koufax and his Richie Allen, Lauterbur wants at it again so he can apply some of his team's experience to the Big Ten, anticipating better results next time.
"We became more of a ball club as the game progressed," was the way Lauterbur put it. "Our defense started to open it up in the second half. A couple of times we had Shuman on the rocks. I'll say that we're a better ball club than we were two weeks ago."

However, Lauterbur wasn't overjoyed with Iowa's fortunes on the afternoon. "They gave us problems," he said. "Their defense was moving a lot up front, and they did a fine job of mixing up their attack—first they'd run inside, then throw outside. We changed our offensive plans after those early touchdowns. You don't have an offensive plan once you get that far behind."

Iowa's backup quarterback Butch Caldwell, who passed for 152 yards and the Hawkeyes only touchdown, wasn't overly impressed with Penn State's showing.
"UCLA and Michigan were both better ball clubs," Caldwell said. "They were quicker, but I think we could have beaten all three. Mistakes have killed us. They didn't really do anything unexpected, but they blitzed more than I thought they would."
"The footing was bad to me. At one time if I could have planted my foot, I could have scored."

Iowa's starting quarterback Kyle Skogman took a different perspective on the Lion's performance.
"I can't really say whether Penn State is tougher than Michigan or UCLA, but I can say this was the toughest game for me," Skogman said. The Hawkeye senior completed five of his 11 passes for 33 yards and one interception.
"Last year Penn State made more mistakes," Lauterbur said. "But this is a better Penn State club than we played a year ago. As far as mistakes go, I think we're improving there, anyway."

... but schedule denies Lions the chance

If exciting collegiate football is one's fare, then Beaver Stadium certainly should not have been his vantage point Saturday afternoon. But the real disappointment may have come 600 miles to the south in Athens, Ga.
While Penn State was romping in the rain, Georgia was taking a considerable part of the glamour of the Lion's season. North Carolina State, the only of Penn State's opponents to rank among the top 20, was upset by the Bulldogs 31-12.

North Carolina State had been considered on of the last hopes to give Penn State a true test this season. Air Force and West Virginia should give it good games; Maryland and Pitt might give it good games. But N.C. State likely was the one to upset Penn State if anyone was.
The problem with Penn State football is that it is just that—Penn State football. No one else ever gets into the game. Or if they do, they're usually out of it after a quarter, which was the case Saturday. Penn State was too good. Iowa never really had a chance.
And if games like that are boring the fans, they're not helping the team, either. Iowa, for instance, is gaining something by playing teams that offer a test, perhaps too much of a test.
"I'll say," said Iowa coach Frank Lauterbur after successive shellings by Michigan, UCLA and Penn State, "that we're a better ball club than we were two weeks ago."
This year's Penn State

squad, virtually going untested week after week, is being compared with the school's greatest. Coach Joe Paterno, however, isn't quite willing to concede all that. The reason?
"They adjusted well today, but you don't know how good you are until you've got to come from behind," he said. "Things have been easy for us so far."
"We'll see how good we are when we get involved in a game where one mistake can cost you the whole thing."
It wasn't that sort of a game Saturday. Penn State was up by three touchdowns after 12 minutes and coasted—or got careless, as Paterno said—until the reserves mercifully flowed into the game.

The week before Lauterbur had criticized loudly the tactics of UCLA coach Pepper Rodgers, whom he accused of running the score up to 55-18 after Iowa proved itself a little too stubborn. Lauterbur had no complaints in the department Saturday, for, as he undoubtedly knows, the score could have been much worse than 27-8.
But Paterno did have a complaint or two. After the game he shrugged off a question dealing with the effects of the "wet" on Penn State with: "It didn't help them, either."
But then he went on. "It looks pretty when they let the grass get long, but if there's rain—and you know how short the cleats are—it's pretty tough. It's not fair to the kids to make them play on something like that. The grass should be cut the way it's supposed to be."

Somehow it's ironic that the groundskeepers seem to give Joe Paterno nearly as much trouble as do his opponents.
Scores of Penn State opponents: Stanford 23, San Jose State 12; Michigan 14, Navy 0; Air Force 10, New Mexico 6; California 51, Army 6; Washington 21, Syracuse 7; West Virginia 17, Illinois 10; Maryland 31, Villanova 3; Georgia 31, North Carolina State 12; Toledo 35, Ohio 8; Pitt 21, Northwestern 14.

ARE PHONEY CREDIT CARD CALLS WORTH A CRIMINAL RECORD?

Plus a stiff fine...a jail sentence... or both?

Not everyone seems to realize that charging phone calls to a fraudulent credit card number is against the law. And that the law sets heavy penalties for violators.
In this state, there's a fine of up to $500—or one year in jail—or both. (In some states, fines range as high as $10,000, with jail sentences of up to 10 years.)
Modern electronic computer systems are making it increasingly easy to track down offenders. And the Telephone Company will not tolerate fraudulent calling, no matter who the offender may be.
The penalties may seem harsh for something that may be done out of thoughtlessness. But the fact remains: The law does not look on phone fraud as a lark.

Would you believe a picture this big comes from a little Kodak pocket Instamatic camera? It does. In color, too! And the picture's only half of it. Turn it over, address it, put on an 8¢ stamp and you've got a postcard. It's just the thing for people with a whole lot of letters to write because you don't have to write a whole lot on a postcard. The picture says it all.
