

Future for lion booters?

By BRIAN MILLER
Collegian Sports Writer

Penn State's soccer team is merrily heading for yet another successful season this year. Currently 6-0-3 and after shelling Shippensburg 7-0 last Friday night the booters are primed and ready for a confrontation with Temple Friday night in Philadelphia.

Yet as well as the Lion booters seem now to have it, an unseen problem may become a factor, not this year but next.

The problem is graduating talent seniors who are key players in the Penn State attack.

Ciro Baldino, wing, three-year letterman and a senior. He is a major part of the Lion attack and one of the team's leading scorers.

"I can't see any problem next year," Baldino said. "The second team is really good and we don't beat them very easily in practice."

Baldino feels that Penn State may even gain in some form from the graduation of leading scorer Chris Bahr.

Baldino said, "Chris is a great shooter but not always a constant defender. The play is around him of course, but next year the team will have to make the plays for other players which will help the team overall."

Along with Baldino and Bahr, Randy Garber will also graduate and another gap will be open in the Penn State attack.

Garber was the second leading scorer on the team last fall and is high in team scoring this year. He is also a full-field defender and playmaker.

"I really don't know of anybody that will take his (Garber's) spot," Baldino said. "He's a great passer and ballhandler and he doesn't lose the ball often."

"Between Bahr and Garber we have a great team and it's hard to see the gaps filled specifically but the team next year, I think, will collectively be just as good."

Still it is hard, even after listening to Baldino, to believe that Penn State won't suffer some from graduation.

"Players of that calibre don't come along every year," Penn State coach Walter Bahr said. "But I think we have quality players in school for next year."

Bahr does recognize the problem he will have in replacing his key seniors but is optimistic with the talent he now has and adds, "We're looking to bring in three or four outstanding freshmen."

"A lot will depend on how much improvement there is. Hopefully, some of the players will play in the winter league this year."

But even as he talked, Bahr's mind was not on next year, or even the NCAA Soccer Championships soon to convene. His primary concern is the Temple contest Friday.

"Temple is a good club, we'll have our hands full," Bahr said. "I just hope people aren't looking past Friday's game."

Senior Ciro Baldino doesn't feel Lion performances will slip after veterans graduate.

Ram's front four still "Fearsome"

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Only Merlin Olsen remains from the old "Fearsome Foursome," but the Los Angeles Rams' current defensive front line looks as swift and vicious as its celebrated predecessor.

Olsen, fellow tackle Larry Brooks and ends Fred Dryer and Jack Youngblood dropped quarterbacks Tom Owen and Norm Snead four times in the Rams' 15-13 victory over the San Francisco 49ers Monday night in a National Football League game in windy Candlestick Park.

"It felt like they were flying in from everywhere," Owen said afterward.

They also ruined Snead's first performance as a 49er, hurrying him into a fourth-quarter interception that killed a late 49er rally and sealed the game for the Rams.

The new "Fearsome Foursome" now has 28 sacks this season, making it the top quarterback killer in the National Conference.

"We didn't get any sacks last week against the New York Jets, so we figured we had to make up for it, somehow, this week," said Brooks, who caught young Owen twice himself and forced him into a second-quarter fumble that led to a Ram touchdown.

This is only the second season that Brooks, Olsen, Dryer and Youngblood have played together as a unit. They made their debut last year with 45 sacks and were first in the NFL in rushing defense.

Olsen, who terrorized quarterbacks in the 1960's along with Deacon Jones, Lamar Lundy, Rosie Grier and Roger Brown, says the current Ram front four has had to become more adept at stopping the run than its predecessor.

The Rams all but shut off the 49ers on the ground Monday night. Time after time, Olsen, Brooks, Dryer and Youngblood broke through San Francisco blocking to drop rookie running sensation Wilbur Jackson and running back Larry Schreiber behind the line of scrimmage.
