Students seize campus

ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) — Rightwing students, some firing pistols and throwing Molotov cocktails, seized the campus of Istanbul University yesterday in the latest incident of five weeks of nationwide campus unrest, police said.

No injuries were reported. Police armored cars equipped with water cannons surrounded the campus but made no immediate attempt to enter it.

"They the students moved into the campus firing pistols and throwing Molotov cocktails," a witness said. "Then they raided lecture halls and forced students out of law school classes."

The students closed the large wrought iron gates of the campus — once the Defense Ministry of the Ottoman Empire — and allowed in only sympathizers.

University officials said Rector Haluk Alp averted fighting by first persuading leftwing students to leave the university premises and then talking the rightwingers into giving up their occupation of the lecture halls.

Pa. national cemetery studied

(AP) — Pennsylvania is being considered as the site for a national cemetery, possibly comparable to the one at Arlington, Va., military and Veterans Administration sources said yesterday.

"We are going to build a shrine type cemetery of which the entire nation can be proud," said Rufus Wilson, director of the VA's National Cemetery System in Washington.

"I would not say it'll be the same as Arlington. Arlington has a unique status in America," he said. "But it's going to be a big one."

Wilson said $250,000 has been set aside for the present fiscal year to prepare a master plan for the cemetery. He said planners have not yet decided on a location, but he did mention the Gettysburg and Valley Forge areas as desirable.

"We are looking for surplus federal land, primarily. If not that, then state surplus land," Wilson said.

He said there were no plans now for a Tomb of the Unknown Soldier or an amphitheater, such as exists at Arlington, but there will be a large visitor's center and other features similar to those at Arlington.

Battle over deer rages

STIRLING, N.J. (UPI) — Dozens of red-clad hunters stalked northern New Jersey's Great Swamp National Wildlife Refuge yesterday killing deer that wildlife officials say are in danger of starving. Environmentalist groups tried in vain to stop the hunt.

A dozen deer were shot down in the first two hours as 130 hunters spread through thick brush in the 6,000-acre sanctuary after the Interior Department decided herds were becoming too big.

Environmentalist groups protested, but a three-member panel of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia turned down their request.

As the hunters arrived before dawn they were greeted by pickets with signs reading: "Wildlife Refuge Should Not be a Butcher Shop," and "Show Your Masculinity Where it Helps, Boys."

William Whalen, a regional spokesman for the National Fish and Wildlife Service, was asked if any of the hunters believed it was less sporting to hunt a starving herd.

"They don't feel that way. It is frankly a means of getting a much healthier herd," he said. Whalen said that the Interior Department hoped that as many as 350 of the 600 deer in the refuge would be taken during the six days of the hunt.

Health programs approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Compromise legislation to continue five health programs and establish several new ones, including the first national effort to combat rape, has won House approval.

The House voted 372 to 14 yesterday to approve $1.859 billion over two years for the programs.

The House originally had approved $1.735 billion for two-year funding while the Senate passed a measure calling for $3.154 billion over four years. The compromise measure now goes to the Senate.

Among the programs extended and their funding authority were family planning, $472.5 million; community mental health centers, $303 million; migrant health programs, $155 million; community health centers, $540 million, and comprehensive public health services, $320 million.

The National Center for Rape Prevention and Control will be located within the National Institutes of Mental Health and will include research on ways to curtail rapes; help the victims and rehabilitate the offenders. Some $20 million was approved for this.

Russian couple leave U.S.

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Russian couple returned illegally to the Soviet Union after four months in Philadelphia because life in the United States is too mercenary, the newspaper Sovetskaya Rossiya said yesterday.

The newspaper said Joseph and Annetta Shkiyar flew to Moscow with a tourist group and quoted Mrs. Shkiyar as saying: "We will kiss all the stones in Odessa. For all those who want to leave the Soviet Union, let them first speak to me and my husband."

It said formalities were being completed for the couple to return to Odessa, their home town on the Black Sea.

According to the newspaper, the Shkiyars left Odessa last August and lived with well-to-do relatives in a comfortable suburb of Philadelphia.

"We found ourselves in an alien world," Annetta was quoted as saying. "Children there put their parents into old folks' homes and rarely visit them, and if a man was lying in the street they would not call an ambulance because of the cost of the telephone call.

"In the United States, everyone lives for himself and by himself. Everything, even relations between people, is decided by money."

Separate trials requested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special Watergate Prosecutor Henry S. Ruth Jr. asked the U.S. District Court yesterday to reconsider its order giving former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally Jr. separate trials for bribery and perjury.

Chief Judge George L. Hart Jr. granted Connally's motion for separate trials Nov. 25 during oral arguments.

Connally was indicted last summer on charges of accepting a bribe of $10,000 in milk producer funds in exchange for his help in obtaining the 1971 increase in the federal price support for raw milk, and then lying about it.

In the six-page motion, the prosecutor argued that it was "regular practice" for both substantive offenses and related false declaration charges to be tried at one time.

During the oral arguments, Edward Bennett Williams, Connally's lawyer, argued that if both charges were tried at once, the trial jury might conclude from the alleged false statements that the illegal payments actually had occurred.

The prosecutor said there was an "intimate connection" in the charges "and it would be appropriate to try them in a single trial."

Vatican raps prison sentence

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican said yesterday the 12-year prison sentence an Israeli court imposed on Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capucci was in conflict with the Holy Land's tradition of respect for religious leaders.

The carefully worded statement, read out by Vatican spokesman Federico Alessandrini, did not say whether the Vatican considered Capucci innocent or guilty but predicted his conviction would increase Arab-Israeli tension.

An Israeli court in Jerusalem convicted the bearded prelate Monday of contacting Palestinian guerrilla leaders in Beirut and smuggling weapons into Israel for sabotage purposes.

"The Holy See has learned about the sentencing of Msgr. Hilarion Capucci with profound pain and regret, in the same way as it had expressed keen concern over his entire controversial case," the statement said.

In Jerusalem, Israeli State prosecutor Gabriel Bach said no moves are underway to deport Capucci rather than allowing him to serve out his prison sentence.
