

Knicks, Rangers, Jets in last NYC teams hurting

NEW YORK (AP) — If President Ford won't bail out New York City, will he please do something about its professional sports teams?

Ford has turned a cold shoulder on the New York Defaults, also called the Beame Team, which has solicited — so far unsuccessfully — some major league help for its financially troubled franchise. But what about the other teams?

What about the last-place Knicks, Rangers and Jets, or the next-to-last place Giants? Who's going to bail them out?

Mike Burke, the president of Madison Square Garden, wants to help.

"In times of crisis and turmoil, we know how essential it is to have winning teams," Burke said yesterday. "That's why we're doing everything we can to build championship teams at Madison Square Garden."

Only, like everything else the Big Apple seems to touch these days, Burke's moves have been turning into lemons.

After working for months trying to land a big man for his New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association, Burke signed All-Star forward Spencer Haywood. But Haywood, an enforcer at Seattle, has turned into a sheep in Knicks' clothing here.

In nine games with the Knicks, who are last in the NBA's Atlantic Division, Haywood has scored 144 points and hasn't looked like anybody's salvation.

Then Garden management waved its magic wand over its National Hockey League club, the Rangers, producing only clouds of black smoke.

First goalie Gilles Villemure was dispatched to Chicago for defenseman Doug Jarrett. Villemure has won twice in two starts for the Black Hawks, while Jarrett, sick and injured for part of his tenure with the Rangers, hasn't turned around New York's goal-allowing generosity.

Crowd-favorite Derek Sanderson was sent to St. Louis for a draft choice. Sanderson, who didn't score a goal for the Rangers this year, has four goals and three assists in six games with the Blues.

Next to leave New York was longtime Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin, picked up by the Detroit Red Wings. In his first start as a Red Wing, Giacomin beat the Rangers 6-4 and was emotionally cheered while the Rangers, the home team, were hooted and jeered.

Then the Rangers announced a blockbuster deal, getting Boston's high-scoring center Phil Eposito and defenseman Carol Vadnais for defenseman Brad Park, center Jean Ratelle and rookie defenseman Joe Zanussi.

Vadnais has refused to report to the Rangers. Eposito scored two goals in his first appearance but sprained an ankle in his next game and will be out of the lineup for a few days.

A successful football season is highly unlikely now for the Jets, last in the American Conference East, and the Giants, one rung from the bottom in the National Conference East.

The only winning teams carrying the New York tag — the Islanders in the NHL and the Nets in the American Basketball Association — operate in suburban Long Island, where default and defeat seem a million miles away.
